New Storms Forecast For Stricken Westland; Rescue Work Speeded

Aid Teams Step Up Movement of Food, Fuel Before Roads Are Blocked Again

From Press Dispatches

Chicago, Feb. 2.—New storms were forecast today for part of the snow-stricken Western Plains. Rescue agencies redoubled their efforts to get food and fuel into newly reopened communities before snow could block roads again.

The forecast of blowing snow for western Nebraska Thursday night came as new snow flurries fell in Utah. There were these other developments on the storm front today:

In 24 hours, roads have been opened to 1686 snow-marooned persons in South Dakota and Nebraska, Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick reported.

206 Miles Cleared

To accomplish this, snowplows and bulldozers heaved snow and ice from 206 miles of road. But Gov. Val Peterson estimated 40,000 miles of Nebraska roads still are choked with ice and snow.

Pick said 684 bulldozers and 58 weasels now are operating in Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming and men are working 20 hours a day.

Weatherwise plainsmen didn't wait for officials to warn them. As soon as the roads were opened they gathered new supplies of food and fuel. They know that February and March are the bad weather months on the plains.

The warning of more bad weather was echoed in Washington.

Assistant Army Secretary Gordon Gray said the "real danger" lies in possible new storms.

Bill Approval Due

Congress is expected Thursday to approve a bill providing another $500,000 for storm relief.

In other storm developments:

The Red Cross said 11,975 families have been deprived of normal living conditions and that aid has been given to 4285 families. Approximately 2200 families have received food, fuel, clothing or assistance in leaving their homes.

At San Antonio, Tex., the president of the National Wool Growers Association painted a picture of dark prospects for the domestic wool industry.

Sylvan J. Pauly, Deer Lodge, Mont., said the loss of cattle and sheep would run into several million head and "the United States now has the lowest number of sheep at any time since the Civil War."

Thirty-eight plane-loads of food were dropped from the air to hungry and snowed-in Navajo Indians on the New Mexico-Arizona Reservation today before a new storm swept down and halted the aerial mercy mission.

Groundhog Holes Up Again

Snow or Sleet Expected Here After Drop to 15 in Suburbs

Without even a consultation with a groundhog, the weatherman is promising for today some wintry weather that wil curl your toes.

Temperatures will plummet to 22 in the city and 15 in the suburbs by early morning and there's a possibility of snow or sleet at night.

If any groundhogs roused themselves yesterday to go forth and look for their shadows, they saw them. No doubt about it. There was plenty of sunshine.

According to legend, if the groundhog sees his shadow he returns to his burrow to wait out six more weeks of bitter winter weather.

The Associated Press reported that a Punxsutawney, Pa., groundhog peeked out into the 20-degree cold at 7:32 a. m., then hurried back into his earthly home.

Pennsylvanians report the groundhogs in their State are particularly adept at foretelling whether the winter will be prolonged when they make their February 2 inspection.

But the groundhog of Dr. William M. Mann at our zoo could probably do as well if given an equal chance.

The groundhog at the zoo has no chance to see his shadow. He is kept in a cage in a heated building. He'll have to read the weather forecasts like the rest of us.

Most of today will be marked by increasing cloudiness, with a high temperature of about 38. The weatherman's best guess is that there will be snow or sleet late tonight.

Yesterday's temperature range was a low 23 at 6:20 a. m. and a high 40 at 3:28 p. m.

Two Former PWs Identify Miss Gillars

Allied Officers Say Axis Sally Approached Them With Microphone

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Two former Army officers — an American and a Canadian—yesterday pointed to Miss Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars, 48, in District Court as the sympathetic visitor who approached them with a microphone as they lay wounded in a Paris hospital, that they might send messages home.

Their testimony, in the words of Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., to the court, was "offered in proof of overt act No. 4."

Two witnesses to each overt act are required under the law to prove treason, the charge of which Miss Gillars stands accused and under which she faces a possible death sentence.

Dramatic Series of Events

It was the first time during the trial which started January 24, that the Government had been able to produce the required two witnesses to a specific allegedly overt action.

Events exploded in a dramatic series yesterday:

1. The Government received a surprise setback, though perhaps only a temporary one, when a witness slated to testify he had performed with Miss Gillars in a propaganda play, "Vision of Invasion," was withdrawn when he balked at taking the oath on a Bible. The witness was George Heinrich Schnell, former German actor.

2. The defense revealed that two witnesses were being brought here from Germany, at Government expense, who are expected to testify that Miss Gillars was threatened with death if she did not do as she was told on the Nazi radio.

3. Werner Plack, a former member of the German Foreign Office, testified he accompanied Miss Gillars and Dr. Otto Koischwitz, German radio official, on trips to a prisoner of war camp and a French hospital where recordings of interviews with American soldiers were made.

First of the former Allied officers to testify was Harvey Crosthwaite of Hamilton, Canada, former Canadian army artillery captain wounded and captured in Normandy.

The witness, of slight build and attired in a neat blue suit, testi-

Arlington Puts Its First Tax On Businesses

Levies Also Adopted On Professions, Cars; $400,000 Yield Seen

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

The Arlington County Board last night approved the first taxes on businesses, professions and auto licenses in the county history.

Board members estimate the new taxes will bring in an estimated $400,000 or more yearly in new revenue. Several significant changes, however, were made in the proposals before the approval action was taken.

As soon as the new levies are advertised on February 11, they become immediately effective, retroactive to January 1. First tax payments will be due on or before March 31, although in subsequent years, the due date will be January 31.

Professional Men's Taxes

Professional men—doctors, architects, etc.—originally were to have paid 52 cents for each $100 of gross income. As the tax now stands, they pay on this scale: A tax of $10 yearly for income less than $5000; $35 for income between $5000 and $12,000; $75 between $12,000 and $25,000, and $100 for incomes $25,000 and more.

The schedule for contractors was similarly modified from a tax of 26 cents a $100 gross receipts to the following: $10 tax on receipts between $1000 and $5000; $15, $5000 to $10,000; $30, $10,000 to $20,000; $50, $20,000 to $50,000; $100, $50,000 to $100,000; $150, $100,000 to $150,000; $275, $150,000 to $300,000; $475, $300,000 to $500,000, and $600 tax on rceeipts more than $500,000.

15 Cents a 100 Pounds

Board members emphasized that the change for professional men and contractors will cause them pay less tax than under the gross receipts method.

Also decreased in last night's final adoption was the gross receipts tax on retail merchants—from 15 to 12 cents a $100.

The auto license tax adopted last night will be based on a charge of 15 cents a 100 pounds of weight of the vehicle, with a maximum tax of $3 for passenger cars. The rate is about 50 per cent of the State auto license tax.

For teeth to enforce its new taxes, the board provides a 5 per cent penalty for tardiness in payment, with a maximum penalty of $300 and 30 days in jail for intentional tax evasion.

Measure Returns to House

Maryland Senate Passes Bill To Continue Income Tax at 2%

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 2.—The Maryland State Senate today passed a bill to keep Maryland's personal earned income tax rate at 2 per cent.

The measure, backed by the State administration, must go back to the House for concurrence on two technical amendments, but observers here expected routine House approval.

The bill now is expected to be sent to Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., for his signature within a few days.

Under the present Maryland income tax law, enacted at the last session of the Legislature, the tax rate would have jumped automatically to 2½ per cent this year.

Originally scheduled for speedy passage when it was first introduced several weeks ago, the tax relief measure was rushed through the House of Delegates but was held up by the Senate Finance Committee.

Principal reason for the Senate committee delay, it was said, was an attempt by Senator Edward D. Storm (D., Frederick) to amend the bill to reduce the tax next year on the first $1000 of unearned income from 5 to 2 per cent.

Storm pressed for the amendment today but it was defeated by a 16-13 vote after Majority Leader L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges) called for its defeat.

Administration sources said the reduction in the personal earned income tax was proposed when it was found the State's retail sales

Atom Secret Rules Spur Hot Debate

Lilienthal, McMahon Fought on Publicity Stand in Unusual Hearing at Capitol

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A red-hot row over secrecy rules for the Atomic Energy Commission marked an extremely rare open session of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee of Congress yesterday.

On one side were David E. Lilienthal, Atomic Energy Commission chairman, and Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), committee chairman who wish to release all information about atomic energy possible without endangering America's security.

On the other side were Senators Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) and Tom Connally (D., Tex.), who not only opposed any further extension of publicity about the Nation's atomic energy program, but expressed a belief that too much has been divulged already.

Tydings led the attack on the semiannual report by the AEC made public Monday. He said the report told too much, that pictures it contained of atomic energy research plants—particularly one at Brookhaven, Long Island, N. Y.—divulged more than they should.

Wants Foreign Data

"I'd like to have such pictures from other countries for the use of our General Staff," he declared, and added: "I'd like to put those who want to pry into our affairs to the trouble of finding out these things for themselves."

The Tydings-Connally attack was caused by McMahon's suggestion that it might be a strategic move to tell the world how many atom bombs this country possesses. Lilienthal tended to agree with him—and proposed that consideration be given to such a disclosure.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) interjected a remark that one of the early rules of the committee had been that such information must be kept secret. He presumed, he said, that McMahon was suggesting a study of this rule to see if it should be reversed.

Tydings didn't limit his criticism of publicity to atomic energy. He also "questioned" recent publicity about "our airplanes beating the speed of sound." In reply to a comment by Lilienthal about "wholesome and sound secrecy."

"Superbomb" Complaint

Referring to headlines about Lilienthal's Monday report, which referred to "superbombs," Tydings declared information released by the commission "should neither alarm our own people or inspire our enemies—to spur them on to greater efforts."

In supporting Tydings, Connally grumbled against "rushing into print whenever any improvement is made." He saw in the papers, he said, that America had produced bombs "many times bigger than Bikini."

Lilienthal remarked that "after all, we are spending public money," and that he believed in the "general principle of reporting to the Congress and the country."

Connally cut him short with the comment that he was required to

Clark Says Truman Can Halt Strikes

Attorney General Cites President's 'Inherent Powers' In Emergencies

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

An opinion by Attorney General Tom C. Clark that the President can enjoin national emergency strikes even if Congress enacts the Administration's new labor bill last night kicked up a bitter row in the Senate Labor Committee.

The wrangle, capping a stormy day of labor hearings, ended only with the 10 p. m. adjournment curfew, previously agreed upon.

Two paragraphs of Clark's opinion, read into the record by Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), apparently caught Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin by surprise.

'Great Power' Cited

He had maintained that no national emergency injunction powers were intended in the bill and the committee's own impression was that the Administration had thrown away the Taft-Hartley Act club over national paralysis strikes.

Clark said in his letter that the Government would have access to the courts in any national crisis resulting from failure of either party to a dispute breaking the 30-day "cooling off" mandate in the bill. He said the President had "exceedingly great" power to act in emergencies even without specific authority from Congress.

Republican members of the committee made the most of what seemed a divergence between Clark and Tobin.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) said the Administration was "in the position of running two quarterbacks and one of them fumbled the ball pretty badly." Chairman Thomas angrily tapped the gavel when Morse called Clark's letter a "most unsound opinion."

Thomas tried to persuade the committee to put off any discussion of the letter until today, maintaining only part of the opinion had been read into the record and only one member had had a chance to read it.

Donnell Supports Morse

Morse said Thomas had no right to cut off discussion and the dispute reached the personal level. Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), the only member who had seen a copy of the letter, swung into the argument on Morse's side.

Donnell said Tobin, who was then on the witness stand, made it "very clear" there was no injunction power in the bill. He charged the opinion "recognized the weakness of the bill" by attempting to assure the country the President has inherent power to go to the courts. He said he knew of no such authority.

Right after the two controversial paragraphs were read, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) turned to Tobin and asked:

"Is this the first you've heard of it?"

"Yes," replied Tobin, reiterating that the intention was to draw a bill that did not have injunction powers.

Authoritatively Summed Up

Russia Offers No Concessions In Outline of 'Peace' Demands

By Marguerite Higgins
NYHT News Service

Berlin, Feb. 2.—The Russians spelled out today in their official newspaper here the demands which Soviet Russia would make as a prelude to real East-West "peace action."

The terms were stated in Taeglische Rundschau, official Red army newspaper. They showed no retreat from previous positions, but rather summed up demands made by the Soviet in the United Nations and elsewhere during the past year.

The article appeared to quash speculations that Premier Stalin's replies to an American newsman might herald an era of real concessions by the Soviet.

Taeglische Rundschau, an authoritative voice of Soviet foreign policy, asserted the prerequisite for real "peace action" includes: "Withdrawal of American troops from Greece and Korea, assent to the Soviet demand for a one-third reduction in world armaments and also its demands for abandonment of the Atlantic Pact," that the United States "cease using the United Nations as an agent of the State Department," and that the United States cease it illegal activities in Berlin.

The newspaper declared: "The simplest thing would be to agree with Stalin's suggestions and sign a Soviet-American peace declaration; postpone the announcement of a West German state; call a meeting of the foreign ministers, and arrange a meeting between Stalin and Truman."

Corning Renamed As School Chief

Dr. Hobart M. Corning yesterday was reappointed to a three-year term as superintendent of District public schools.

The Board of Education by unanimous vote approved extending his services a month before his original three-year appointment would have run out.

As superintendent of schools, Dr. Corning receives a salary of $14,000 a year, the highest paid to a District official. A graduate of Central High School here and a former District high school cadet, the 59-year-old educator was superintendent of schools in Omaha, Nebr., before his appointment here.

Ben Hogan Narrowly Escapes Death as Sedan, Bus Collide

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Ben Hogan, top American golfer, suffered "numerous fractures" and narrowly averted death today when his new Cadillac sedan crashed head-on with a Greyhound bus.

Doctors at Hotel Dieu, the hospital where Hogan was taken, said "in all probability Hogan will be able to play golf again after a long period of recuperation."

He suffered a fractured pelvis, broken collar bone, and three broken ribs. Doctors said he suffered from shock but was "coming out of it."

Hogan saved his own life when at the last moment before the crash he threw his body in front of his wife, Valerie.

"It's a good thing he did, because the engine of our car was tossed back into the seat and the steering gear was shoved through the driver's seat and into the rear section," Mrs. Hogan said.

Tariff-Slash Bill to Reach House Tuesday

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

With Administration forces confident of victory, the House is slated Tuesday to take up a measure restoring full powers to President Truman to slash tariffs in return for trade concessions from foreign nations.

House action was slated after the Democratic-controlled Ways and Means Committee pushed through, 17 to 8, a measure repealing the GOP tariff act of 1948 which restricted the President's powers.

The measure restores until June 12, 1951, all the authority of the old reciprocal trade law.

Action came on the specific request of the Chief Executive, who said the Republican trade act hobbles the negotiation of trade pacts needed to promote world commerce and peace.

On the vote, 15 Democrats were joined in support of the measure by two Republicans—Representatives Robert W. Kean of New Jersey and Hal Holmes of Washington.

The reciprocal trade measure will be debated Tuesday with a vote scheduled for Wednesday. It will be taken up under an open rule permitting any amendment to be offered.

Democratic leaders predicted House approval by a large majority, but GOP figures promised a stiff floor fight.

Republicans have contended that the State Department has usurped the tariff-making powers of Congress.

Under the new bill, the President could cut American import duties as much as 50 per cent below tariffs in effect January 1, 1945.

North Korean March Stirs Fear of War

Chungdan, Korea, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Six hundred more North Koreans entered South Korea today, a government official reported, arousing fears of open civil war between the Russian and American occupation zones.

Sihn Sung-Mo, South Korean minister of home affairs, called it an invasion, "definitely not a guerilla action" but an "international affair" which might lead to full-fledged war.

He planned to report to President Syngman Rhee on the "seriousness of the situation" after a two-day inspection of the battle area.

The new invasion unit joined 400 North Koreans who crossed the border Monday, officials said. They were reported supported by 2000 troops who remained north of the thirty-eighth parallel dividing line in 40 or more pillboxes thrown up during the night.

Observers believed the North Korean action was aimed at cutting off a strategic section of South Korean territory 45 miles long and 20 miles deep.

Senate Rules Group Puts Off Showdown on Filibuster Bill

Southern Senators fighting anti-filibuster legislation gained a week's respite yesterday when the Senate Rules Committee decided, 7 to 5, to postpone a vote.

Republican Senators immediately threatened to take the issue directly to the floor.

Senator William F. Knowland (D., Calif.) served notice he will introduce today a resolution discharging the Rules Committee from further consideration of the matter and later this week ask a "stand up and be counted" vote.

The surprise motion postponing the Rules Committee showdown was made by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) at a meeting called ostensibly to act on the rules change. Gillette said he and other "new members" wanted more time to make up their minds.

The delay came after Senator Knowland moved the committee adopt a rules change resolution jointly introduced by Rules Chairman Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) and Senate Republican Leader Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.).

This would make it possible for the Senate to bring any matter to a showdown by a two-thirds vote, by a cloture motion barring unlimited debate on the Senate Journal or another favorite filibustering device, motions to call up legislation.

Senator Francis Myers (Pa.), Senate Democratic whip, moved to amend the Knowland motion to permit cloture by a simple majority of the Senate.

U. N. Pledge Cited

Twice yesterday the United States Government let it be known that it was unimpressed by the olive branch held out this week by Premier Josef Stalin.

In the morning, White House Secretary Charles G. Ross announced that President Truman had no intention of going abroad to meet the Soviet leader, although the President was willing, as always, to receive Stalin in Washington.

This followed a new question-and-answer exchange with the International News Service, in which Stalin said the state of his health prevented him from going beyond Russia, Poland or Czechoslovakia for a meeting with the President.

All But One "Worthless"

In the afternoon, Secretary of State Dean Acheson rejected as worthless all except one of Stalin's well-published answers to the news agency's questionnaire.

The one exception was the answer in which Stalin said he would lift the Berlin blockade if the western allies postponed forming a western German government. This, Acheson told his press conference, was the "most interesting" answer of the lot.

Without suggesting that it would lead to a settlement of the Berlin quarrel, the Secretary reminded the Russians that "all the normal methods of communication" were open for any serious proposal they wanted to make.

And he gave an official assurance that the United States, together with the other occupying powers, would carefully consider any proposal consistent with their commitments, rights and duties in Berlin.

As for the other Stalin answers, however, Acheson was scathing as he subjected them to a lawyer-like point-by-point analysis.

Rebuked For Method

The first, offering to consider a Soviet-American pact of peace, Acheson said was already covered by the solemn commitment of the two nations in signing the United Nations Charter.

The second, saying the Soviet government would "naturally" join in measures such as "gradual disarmament," Acheson disposed of by citing Soviet vetoes in the Security Council and Soviet "obstruction" elsewhere in the United Nations.

The third, dealing with Stalin's willingness to meet President Tru-

Britain Willing Now to Restore Envoys to Spain

London, Feb. 2. — The Labor government indicated in the House of Commons tonight that it is prepared to support a move in the United Nations to restore ambassadorial representation to Spain.

Ambassadors of United Nations members were withdrawn from Madrid two years ago under a resolution denouncing Generalissimo Franco.

Mayhew apparently favored a softened attitude toward Franco, but he refused to support Spain's admission to the U. N.

Dr. Corning Loves His Job Even If He Did Assume Duties During Troubled Period

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, Washington's 6-foot-5 school superintendent, sometimes thinks the city hasn't "done right" by one of her boys.

* * * * * * *

In the three years that the former District student has headed the schools, he has had to contend with overcrowded schools, students on part-time instruction and teachers dissatisfied with their salaries.

He has had to defend the schools before a committee of Congress against charges of using textbooks containing un-American ideas. The conflicts in the dual school system which he administers erupted last year into a month long parent-inspired strike of students at two Negro schools.

Very Difficult Job

"It is a very difficult job," Dr. Corning told the Board of Education yesterday in accepting an appointment to a second three-year term.

"Sometimes there aren't hours enough or physical energy enough to accomplish all of the tasks."

He listed as compensations the good relationship he now has with the Board of Education, the teachers and the children of the city.

Admitting that "I love my job," he told the board that he will continue to work toward the goal he set up three years ago.

That goal is to make the school system of Washington a model for the rest of the Nation.

"It is a great and unusual challenge," Corning said, "for my roots go back deep into this community."

The school head, though born in Ohio, moved to the District at an early age, attended elementary school here and was graduated from Central High School where he was an officer in the cadet corps. After graduating from Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., which he attended on a scholarship he taught English at a Pennsylvania high school. He was first appointed a superintendent of schools in 1913 at Newport, Pa.

He successively served as superintendent at Trinidad and Colorado Springs, Colo., and at Omaha, Nebr., before coming back to Washington.

In Demand as Speaker

A raconteur who immensely enjoys his own stories, Dr. Corning is in great demand as a speaker before civic and business groups. His long, thin face easily breaks into a boyish grin. Frequently his great height is the brunt of his joke.

He never fails, though, to tell his audience of the need for better paid teachers and for more and better school buildings.

For a year and a half he has recommended a Federal loan to finance school construction. If given sufficent funds to plan ahead, buy sites and build schools to have them ready when the children reach school age, Dr. Corning believes he could avoid most of the difficulties that have beset the District school system within the past several years.

Dr. and Mrs. Corning make their home at the Westchester Apartments. Their two children, Catherine and Hobart, jr., are married and away from home.

Dr. Corning Is Reappointed Superintendent of Schools

* * * * * * *

Dr. Hobart M. Corning yesterday was reappointed to a three-year term as superintendent of District public schools.

The Board of Education by unanimous vote approved an extension of his services a month before his original three-year appointment would have run out.

The board also appointed Mrs. Gladys T. Peterson, principal of Randall Junior High School, to the post of executive assistant to Dr. Garnett C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent in charge of Negro schools.

A list of 30 schools needing new fire alarm box equipment was approved by the board for forwarding to the District Commissioners.

The schools are, by priority: Key, Wormley, Bruce, Reno, Blair, Smallwood, Phillips, Henry Wilson, Takoma, S. J. Bowen, Emery, Fillmore, H. D. Cooke, Webster, Pierce.

Military Road, Cleveland, Morgan, Syphax, Petworth, Wheatley, Ludlow, Hyde, Carver, Truesdell, Raymond, Barnard, Richardson, Ross and Berret.

The board approved a list of new and revised textbooks for use in the schools including a new edition of "Building Citizenship" by R. O. Hughes. A previous edition of the book was criticized last year by Board Member Adelbert W. Lee.

Lee did not vote at yesterday's meeting and took the revised text home to read.

A request of Mrs. Mabel T. Covington, teacher at Thomas Elementary School, for permission to practice law after school hours was referred to Dr. Corning for additional study after he recommended that it be denied.

The board approved the transfer of Negro elementary students now attending the Smallwood School, 3d and I sts. sw., to the S. J. Bowen School, 3d and K sts. sw. Bowen, formerly a white elementary school, has been used for the past year as an annex to Randall Junior High School.

In other actions yesterday the board:

Retired two teachers with long records of service. They are Mrs. Alice W. Tucker, 2025 I st. nw., teacher at Noyes School, after 25 years; and Miss Lillian Duckett, 24, O st. nw., teacher at Monroe Laboratory School, after 24 years.

Appointed Miss Annie E. Duncan, teacher at Cardozo High School, to the principalship of Cardozo Night School, and named Mrs. Helen H. Bolton, teacher at Truesdell Laboratory, temporarily to the post of principal there.

Approved a Russian language course for night school students.

Fireman Saves Man Felled By Auto Fumes

A 23-year-old man, who was overcome by automobile fumes, was recovering at Leland Memorial Hospital yesterday, thanks to his neighbor, a District fireman.

Edward Bickford, 50 Sargent rd., Michigan Park Hills, Prince Georges County, collapsed in the basement of his home Tuesday night, after working on a car in the adjoining garage.

His grandmother, Mrs. Elsie Moulton, 79, also was reported recovering at the hospital. Both she and his mother, Mrs. Helen Bickford, 48, had been affected by the fumes. Mrs. Bickford, however, was released after spending the night in the hospital.

Credit for the rescue work goes to Pvt. Edgar M. Love, 30, attached to the administrative division of Fire Department headquarters. He lives in Michigan Park Hills.

Love heard Mrs. Bickford crying for help from her home on Jenifer st. He went inside and found both her and Mrs. Moulton in a dazed condition and Bickford collapsed.

Truman Asks $375,000 For GI Housing Inquiry

President Truman yesterday asked Congress for $375,000 to investigate veterans housing complaints which are still pouring in "in considerable volume."

Mr. Truman previously had asked Congress for $83,400 to wind up the veterans housing program by March 31. But Budget Director Frank Pace, jr., said Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods will require until June 30 to handle all the complaints.

Many veterans have protested that builders did not fulfill their commitments under the now-abandoned GI housing program.

Hillcrest and Shipley Terrace Residents Voice Transit Needs

The Washington Post
Spectator at yesterday's PUC hearing on Southeast busline changes, a mother, Mrs. Marie Bradshaw, of 3204 Alabama ave. se., holds her daughter, Diana, 4

The Capital Transit Co. plan for extensive bus route changes in Southeast Washington yesterday developed into a friendly "robbing Peter to pay Paul" squabble between Hillcrest and Shipley Terrace residents.

At an all-day hearing before the District Public Utilities Commission, about 100 Southeast area bus commuters agreed on at least one point: Their mushrooming section needs a great deal more bus service everywhere, and "half their potential riding public is being left out in the cold."

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan continued the hearing until February 14.

CTC proposals for changing the basic transit design of the area would not eliminate any actual service and would establish a crosstown busline connecting Bolling Field with Hillcrest, thus providing public transportation for the first time to families in the Camp Simms area.

Outline of Proposals

It also would give Shipley Terrace residents through service to Barney Circle at the expense of eliminating one of two direct intown routes servin t Hillcrest—the storm center of the District Building hearing. Shipley Terrace, a relatively new development, lies between Alabama and Southern aves., near 25th st. se.

Specifically, the CTC plan would:

1. Extend the present W-2 Shipley Terrace line from its present terminus near 25th st. and Naylor rd. se., to Barney circle and rename it route C-2, thus eliminating a transfer for the approximately 700 families of Shipley Terrace.

2. Extend the Portland st., W-4, busline, which now runs from Bolling Field to Alabama ave. and 11th pl. se., along Alabama ave. to 36th pl. se.—the loop of the present C-2 terminus. This proposed route would bridge a gap on Alabama ave., between 11th pl. and Naylor rd., to connect Bolling Field with the Hillcrest area and also provide service to Camp Simms residents.

3. Discontinue the present C-2 line which runs from 36th pl.—the Hillcrest area — along Alabama ave., Naylor rd. and into Barney Circle on grounds that the proposed extension of the Portland st.-Alabama ave. W-4 line would cover much of the same route as the present C-2.

Effect of Proposal

In effect, elimination of the existing C-2 line takes away from Hillcrest residents one of its through routes to Barney Circle, while the proposed C-2 line would give Shipley ter. residents a through route to the circle.

4. Extend operation of the Wheeler rd., V-8, line now serving Barnaby ter., to permit alternating trips via Nichols ave., Portland st., 7th st., Alabama ave. to 11th pl., and south to the present terminal of the Trenton pl. line.

H. F. Hastings, a member of the Hillcrest Citizens Association, 3017 Park dr. se., testified that the proposed C-2 route change would extend service to Shipley ter. at the expense of Hillcrest—an older neighborhood.

Littlefield Cites Need

Malcolm Littlefield, of 2301 Congress st. se., and representing the Shipley Terrace Citizens Group, replied that he had no objection to Hillcrest retaining its present service, but that his area was "badly in need of something better than shuttle service. We have many more residents affected, and besides less than 30 per cent of our people own cars."

CTC officials estimated that 734 Shipley Terrace commuters would be helped and only 81 Hillcrest residents would be adversely affected by the suggested route changes.

E. C. Giddings, vice president of CTC, pointed out that most Hillcrest residents would still have convenient direct service to Barney Circle via the C-6 line which runs along Branch ave. to Pennsylvania ave.

4 Men Flee Reformatory

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 2 (AP).—Four of six prisoners who cut their way out of the State Reformatory for Males near Breathedsville last night remained free today.

Superintendent Henry R. Raymond said two of the sextet were caught before they got out of the prison grounds. He identified them as Norman Walker of Princess Anne, Md., and James E. Owens of Baltimore.

The four who made good their escape were identified as Clarence Weiford, 23, and Edward F. Bray, 18, of Baltimore. Robert E. Lee Brinn, 22, of Washington, D. C., and John J. Nelligan, 20, of Norristown, Pa.

The superintendent said the escapees were serving terms ranging from 3 to 10 years.

Shell Linked To Gun Traced To Edwards

Baltimore, Feb. 2 (AP). — FBI technicians today linked a cartridge found near the bodies of a murdered Glen Burnie couple to a foreign-make automatic pistol the State says belonged to Thomas Alexander Edwards.

Special FBI Agents Robert Frazier and R. M. Zimmers of Washington testified ballistics tests showed the bullets removed from the victims' heads could have been fired by that same weapon.

Edwards, 22, from Freetown, Anne Arundel County, is charged with killing John H. Mahlan and Mary C. Kline. Mahlan and Kline disappeared on a date last September 17. Their bodies were found three days later.

Prosecution testimony today also developed that:

1. Lie detector tests were given Edwards on his arrest November 8. No testimony on this was ruled admissible.

2. On November 12, Baltimore Captain of Detectives Henry J. Kriss read a statement to Edwards which the defendant confirmed sentence by sentence.

3. Edwards was questioned approximately 17 hours during three days after his arrest on November 8. He was interrogated at the Waterloo State police barracks.

The FBI testimony said the bullet holes in the windows of Mahlan's automobile — found abandoned the day after the couple disappeared—were punched by bullets fired from inside.

But a spent bullet discovered on the floor of the blood-stained car was "not necessarily" fired from the same gun as the two slugs recovered from the slain pair, the FBI reported.

Into evidence went a box of Czechoslovakian bullets for an automatic, also Czechoslovakian, which prosecution witnesses testified they got from Edwards' home. The bullets were found at his brother's house nearby, where he had been staying earlier.

John H. Souers, chief of the Anne Arundel County police, was on the witness stand when the matter of the "statement" came up.

Defense Counsel William J. McWilliams said the State will contend the statement is a confesson. And until this is introduced—something the defense will object to—he asked the court to bar testimony on a tour of scenes connected with the crime which Souers and other police officials had taken with Edwards.

Bill Would Bar False Statements On Racial Groups

By The Associated Press

A bill designed to protect racial and religious groups from false statements was introduced in the House yesterday.

It is sponsored by Representatives Javits (R., N. Y.), Klein (D., N. Y.), Keating (R., N. Y.), Dawson (D., Ill.) and Keough (D., N. Y.

Provisions of the measure, outlined at a news conference by three of the five sponsors, would make it unlawful to ship between States, import into the United States or to mail printed or mimeographed material containing false statements against any racial or religious group.

Violation would constitute a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum fine of $1000 and a maximum prison sentence of one year.

The bill provides, however, that no person may be convicted under its terms if statements he made are true, "or was honestly believed by him, upon reasonable grounds, to be true."

U. S. Force Leaving Tsingtao as Base

In the Orient

Royall to See MacArthur On Red Gains

Tokyo, Feb. 2 (AP).—Army Secretary Kenneth Royall said today he will discuss with General MacArthur military gains of the Communists in the Orient.

Royall emphasized, however, "that is not the purpose of my visit."

He said he wanted to learn military problems from the commanders in the Pacific field.

Any changes in the economic and financial programs in occupied Japan will be worked out on the spot by Detroit Banker Joseph M. Dodge, who came here with him to take over the job of financial adviser at MacArthur's request, Royall said.

Royall stressed he did not come here because of any friction between MacArthur and Washington or allied nations.

Royall said he wished to inquire about the recent gain of the Communist Party of 31 seats in the Japanese Diet. He will report to President Truman on his return.

By Arthur Goul

Tsingtao, China (Thursday), Feb. 3 (U.P.).—Vice Admiral Oscar Badger revealed today that within 10 days he and the headquarters of the United States Forces in the Western Pacific will leave for Shanghai.

He indicated only a token force of Marines would be left behind in Tsingtao.

The Western Pacific commandant said the entire staff will sail aboard the flagship Eldorado.

The admiral said in an interview aboard the Eldorado:

"Now that the evacuation of American nationals has been completed, the demands on the Navy's services have diminished," he said. "We're readjusting our forces to meet the needs of the situation. We'll retain only a patrol unit ashore at Tsingtao."

No actual sailing date was announced.

ECA Closing Offices In Peiping, Tientsin

NYHT News Service

Peiping, Feb. 2.—Immediate liquidation of the American Economic Cooperation Administration offices in the Communist-occupied cities of Peiping and Tientsin was ordered today by Shanghai ECA headquarters.

Reports from Tientsin make it plain the Communists have no desire or intention to cooperate with ECA in its food relief program.

A reputable person just returned from Tientsin said the Communists have confiscated 5000 tons of wheat and flour held by ECA there and have begun distribution to the people. The visitor said five million dollars' worth of ECA cotton cloth and yarn, also stored in Tientsin, has not yet been seized—possibly because the Communists have not yet got around to it.

Burma Calls For New Talks To Stop War

Rangoon, Burma, Feb. 2 (AP).—The Government called tonight for new peace talks to end the civil war, as fighting raged in Rangoon's suburbs.

Premier Thakin Nu summoned the the regular head of embattled Karen rebels to his home to resume armistice conversations interrupted by fighting Monday.

The summons was addresed to Saw Ba U Gyi, president of the Karen National Union, at Insein, where Karens and government troops were in battle. Refugees said Insein 1,0 miles north of Rangoon, was in flames.

Government sources said Karen tribesmen stormed and captured the police station at Insein, and attempted to cut off government reinforcements sent from Rangoon.

Official sources said about 800 rebels had established themselves even closer to the capital, near Thamaing astride the Rangoon-Insein Highway. This was the third successive day of fighting in the suburbs.

The tribesmen are fighting to carve out of Burma their own state of Karenistan within the Burma union, but only under certain specific conditions. Among other things, the Karens demand their own military force.

Inciting of Karens By Foreign Power Doubted

London, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—British official sources today discounted reports that insurgent Karens in Burma were being incited or aided by any foreign power and said they are "actually strongly anti-Communist."

A military officer said it was possible the Karens, "who are all good soldiers," today outnumber the Burmese government forces which have "been seriously depleted through desertions and indicipline."

He said "the situation is the most serious Burma has confronted, particularly now that she faces a most severe financial crisis."

Li May Fly to Reds In Dramatic Peace Bid

Nanking, Feb. 2 (AP).—Acting President Li Tsung-jen may dare all and fly to Red territory in a dramatic bid for peace, his friends said today.

The Communists have marked him as a "war criminal" but these sources say he is ready to take his chanees if there seems no other way.

There is growing belief in Nanking, however, that Li at most will be able to speak for Nanking, Shanghai and Hankow.

The move for a deal covering Nanking, Shanghai and Hankow already is in progress.

The surrender of these three cities would follow the Peiping pattern.

Dutch Spurn U. N. Offices

The Hague, Feb. 2 (AP).—The Dutch intend to try to solve the Indonesian question in collaboration with the Indonesians, rather than through United Nations action, an official spokesman said today.

Federalist States Offer Compromise on Indonesia

Batavia, Java, Feb. 2 (AP).—Leaders of Indonesian federalist states sought a compromise agreement today with militant chiefs of the fallen Indonesian Republic.

The federalists offered to recognize Republican President Soekarno and Premier Mohammed Hatta as "government officials of a republic," in joint efforts to establish the proposed United States of Indonesia under the Dutch crown.

The republicans' exact status would be left for future decision, the federalists said in their telegram to Soekarno and Hatta. Both men are captives of the Dutch army.

Committee Skips Action On Ethridge Nomination

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) said the Foreign Relations Committee, at its meeting yesterday took no action on the appointment of Mark F. Ethridge as United States representative on the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine. Ethridge is publisher of the Louisville (Ky.) Times and Courier-Journal.

"There were some people who wanted to be heard on the Ethridge appointment," Connally explained, "so it was decided to take no action at this time." He declined to say who had asked to be heard.

Vessel Bearing 'Merci Train' Receives Noisy U. S. Welcome

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—A flag-bedecked freighter, laden with a million thanks to America from the people of France, received a noisy welcome in New York harbor today.

The French Line freighter, Magellan, carried a 49-car train, bulging with a priceless load of gifts for America. It symbolizes the gratitude of France for the 40-million-dollar Friendship Train of food and gifts sent there by citizens of the United States in 1947.

As the Magellan steamed up the harbor past another famous token of French friendship—the Statue of Liberty—police launches, fireboats and tugs provided an escort and saluted her with whistle blasts and jets of water arched high into the air.

The gratitude train is made up of 49 boxcars of the "40 and 8" type familiar to American doughboys of World War I.

They contain 250 tons of gifts—some one million items in all. They were contributed by an estimated six million French families.

One car is to go to the capital of each State, and the contents of forty-ninth is to be divided between Washington, D. C., and Hawaii.

Guy de la Vasselais, vice president of the gratitude train committee, said the cargo was meant—not as gifts for individuals—but as "the permanent property of the people" for use in schools, museums and other institutions.

Plane Burns After 'Pancaking' at Bolling

STARTLED PILOTS ESCAPE—Emergency squad fights the fire in a C-45 transport plane which stalled on a take-off about 150 feet above Bolling Air Base yesterday and crashed on the snow-covered field. Lieut. William T. Preston, pilot, who was unhurt, said, "I must confess it startled me a bit." Lieut. Roger A. McCaulley, copilot, was cut slightly

U. S. Inspector Is Killed by Mexican Mob

Mexico City, Feb. 2 (AP).—Robert L. Proctor, 23, Foot and Mouth Commission inspector, of Tucson, Ariz., was killed by a Mexican mob Monday at a mountain village 75 miles northwest of here.

Proctor was thought to have escaped after he and three others were attacked by about 600 men and women as they rode horseback into San Pedro del Alto, 5 miles from Temascaltzingo.

Proctor, the commission learned today, was killed and buried at the village and later that night his body was taken into the hills and reburied. Today, Mexican troops brought the body here.

The inspectors were on their way to vaccinate cattle and other animals against foot and mouth diseases. The United States and Mexico cooperate in the work.

This was the third attack in which Foot and Mouth Commission workers have been killed.

Since vaccination has been substituted for general slaughter there has been little trouble. Gen. Harry H. Johnson, United States codirector of the commission, said he was confident Mexican authorities would "push their investigation and punish the guilty."

Two Air Force Officers Escape When Trainer Stalls, Crashes

Two Air Force officers escaped serious injury at 9:10 a.m. yesterday when their twin-engined training plane stalled 150 feet over Bolling Air Force Base, crashed and burned.

The crash occurred just after the plane took off for an instrument training flight over Washington.

Just over the middle of a 6000 foot runway, the C-45 Beechcraft piloted by First Lieut. William T. Preston, 28, of 1060 Barnaby ter. se., stalled and "pancaked" down, landing flat on its belly in snow and mud about 100 feet off the runway.

Capt. William J. Lookado, public relations officer at the field, said the plane quickly burst into flames. The copilot, First Lieut. Roger A. McCaulley, 29, of 204 Portland st. se., was partially dazed by the crash, and Preston helped him out of the plane.

Preston, whose home is in Tulare, Calif., was uninjured, while McCaulley, was admitted to Bolling Air Force Base Hospital for treatment of face lacerations.

Col. S. D. Grubbs, commandant of Headquarters Command at the base, immediately appointed a board of inquiry to investigate the crash.

Bolling Pilot One of Two Killed in B-25 Collision

A Bolling Air Force Base captain was one of two flyers killed yesterday in a mid-air collision of two B-25 bombers near Barksdale Field, La.

Capt. David Ralph Powell, 27, an Air Force pilot attached to Special Air Missions Group at Bolling, was the local officer killed. He was temporarily assigned to Barksdale Field's instrument training school.

The other victim was not identified. Five other Air Force men aboard the two planes parachuted, but were critically injured.

The planes collided at 4000 feet. One of them exploded on impact, while the other crashed to the ground before blowing up.

The injured men included two officers, two cadets and one enlisted man.

Captain Powell enlisted in the Air Force in 1942 as an aviation cadet and after getting his wings, earned a Distinguished Flying Cross, an Air Medal and a presidential citation during the war.

He is survived by his wife, Ann, of Bolling Field; his mother, Mrs. James D. Powell of Baldwin, Long Island; his sister, Mrs. Dorothy P. Ritter, also of Baldwin, and his brother, George L. Powell of Boston.

U. S. Turns Down Hungary's Call For 2 Fugitives

The United States has rejected Hungary's demand that it return crew members of a Hungarian-Russian airliner who landed in the U. S. zone of Germany to escape Communism, the State Department announced yesterday.

It said a U. S. note, handed the Hungarian office Monday, asserted the airmen fled "political oppression," and their personal freedom would be violated if they were forced to return to Hungary.

The airliner, carrying 21 passengers and a crew of 4, landed at Munich in early January while on a regularly scheduled flight from southern Hungary to Budapest.

Two passengers and two of the crew chose to return to Hungary and left Munich January 12. The other 19 passengers and two crew members asked U. S. authorities for "political asylum."

Searchers of 4 Nations Fail to Find Lost B-29

London, Feb. 2 (AP).—Ships and planes of four nations searching for a missing United States B-29 with 15 men aboard had nothing new to report today, the United States Third Air Division said.

Search for the plane, which disappeared last Thursday on a flight from Dakar, French West Africa, to its base in Marham, England, has been concentrated near the Canary Islands.

American, British, French and Portuguese planes and ships of all but the Portuguese navy are taking part in the search.

Amvets Request $100 a Month for Veterans at 65

A World War II veterans' organization asked Congress yesterday for $100 monthly pensions for 65-year-old veterans until social security is broadened to carry the load.

Harold A. Keats, commander of AMVETS (American Veterans of World War II), said members of his organization prefer broadened social security to include all classes of Americans.

Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, told the committee the DAV has no recommendations to make on pension proposals but he presented a DAV program calling for a 25 per cent cost-of-living increase in disability payments. Dependency allowances to all disabled veterans regardless of the degree of disability, and more low-cost rental housing for veterans with service-connected disabilities.

Peron Party To Legalize Second Term

Buenos Aires, Feb. 2 (AP).—Argentina's majority Peronista party reversed itself today and decided to amend the constitution to permit President Juan D. Peron to succeed himself.

Yesterday the party had decided to retain provisions of the 1853 constitution which would prevent the president from serving consecutive six-year terms. Peron's present term expires in 1952.

On January 11, the party had announced it favored an amendment to enable Peron to serve again.

The Peronistas control 109 of the 158 seats in the constituent assembly which is rewriting the old constitution. The party's approval of any projected change is tantamount to adoption.

Two Aid Reds In Libel Suit

Paris, Feb. 2 (AP).—An American author and a British member of Parliament backed Russia today in the fight over Victor Kravchenko's book, "I Choose Freedom."

Author Albert Kahn, testifying as a defense witness in Kravchenko's libel suit against the pro-Communist weekly Les Lettres Francaises, said:

"It is not Russia who has conspired for 30 years against the rest of the world. It is all the governments who, for 30 years have conspired against Russia."

Konni Zilliacus, leftist Labor member of the British Commons, testified:

"I believe Kravchenko's book is part of the abominable propaganda which tends to prepare a third World War."

Big New Carrier Will Be Named 'United States'

President Truman announced yesterday he has approved the name "USS United States" for the 60,000-ton supercarrier on which the Navy plans to start construction this spring.

Keel of the $152,000,000 flat-top, largest vessel ever built, will be laid at Newsport News, Va., about April 15. Construction may take more than two years.

The flush-deck seagoing airfield will be 1090 feet long and 190 feet wide and will carry "the most advanced armament of her time" and "the latest type carrier planes," the White House said.

It will be the second United States Navy ship to bear the name USS United States. Its ancestor, a frigate 200 feet long, was launched in 1797.

Egypt Favors Most Proposals Of Bunche for Palestine Pact

Rhodes, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Egypt has accepted with some modifications acting United Nations Mediator Ralph J. Bunche's proposals for a Palestine settlement, well-informed sources said tonight.

The sources said Egypt offered "some alternative proposals," but agreed with most suggestions set forth by Bunche in "working papers" handed to Egyptian and Israeli representatives Sunday.

Col. Ismail Shirine, who took the papers to Cairo, returned tonight after consulting his government.

Unofficial sources indicated Israel was cool toward Bunche's proposals, but would leave the door open for continued negotiations.

The mediator held a secret conference today with Mark Ethridge, United States representative on the three-nation United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission.

Ethridge arrived here from Beirut, Lebanon, en route to Athens, Greece. From there he will proceed to the Holy City to join Turkish and French representatives on the commission.

Senate Group Approves Palestine Refugee Fund

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday unanimously approved a resolution authorizing the United States to contribute 16 million dollars to the United Nations for the care of Jewish and Arab refugees of the Palestine war.

The legislation was requested by President Truman. Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), said he would place it before the Senate as an "urgent matter."

Stalin Tells Places He'd Meet Truman

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Feb. 2 (AP).—Prime Minister Stalin announced today he would welcome a visit by President Truman to the Soviet Union and, if that was unsatisfactory, could meet him in Czechoslovakia or Poland.

Stalin said that, because of his health, he is unable to go to Washington, though he has long desired to do so. He is 69.

The statement was made in answer to questions put to Stalin in a cable from Paris by Kingsbury Smith, European general manager of International News Service.

Smith's message:

Generalissimo Joseph Stalin, Kremlin, Moscow.

Your Excellency:

The official representative of the White House (Charles G. Ross) stated today that President Truman would be pleased to have the opportunity of conferring with you in Washington. Would you be prepared, Your Excellency, to travel to Washington for this purpose?

If, not, then where would you be prepared to meet the President?

With profound respect,

KINGSBURY SMITH.

Stalin's reply:

In answer to your telegram of Februarv 1, I thank President Truman for the invitation to go to Washington.

To visit Washington has long been my desire, which I expressed to President Roosevelt at the time in Yalta and President Truman in Potsdam. I regret that at present I am deprived of the possibility of carrying out this desire of mine, since doctors strongly object to my making any long journey, especially by air or sea.

The government of the Soviet Union would welcome the President's visit to the USSR. A conference could be arranged in Moscow, Leningrad, or Kaliningrad, Odessa, or Yalta, according to the President's choice, if this should not inconvenience the President.

If, however, these proposals should meet with the President's objection, a meeting could be arranged in Poland or Czechoslovakia, according to the President's wish.

Respectfully, Stalin, Feb. 2, 1949."

Slavs Charge Soviet Breach

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 2. (AP). Yugoslavia spoke sharply today of her exclusion by Russia from the Economic Council of Mutual Aid (ECMA).

Foreign Minister Edvard Kardelj declared the failure to include his country was an indefensible violation of treaties. Yugoslavia has trade and defense pacts with ECMA members.

Only when the Soviets stop trying to punish Yugoslavia for refusal to give blind obedience to Cominform orders can the two countries get along, he said.

Kardelj declared a provision in the ECMA agreement promising equal rights to all participating states was exactly what Yugoslavia has demanded.

Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary joined the Russians in forming ECMA in Moscow last month.

Stalin's Proposal to Meet With Truman Alarms British

From Press Dispatches

London, Feb. 2.—Premier Stalin's invitation to President Truman for a meeting was received here with evident anxiety. Today the British do not want an exclusive Soviet-American conference on European or world issues.

British official spokesmen admitted they thought President Truman had been put in an awkward position. They even acknowledged privately they feared Stalin might agree to go to Washington to see the President. The thought alarmed them.

At Paris, Premier Henri Queuille, repeated that the world is looking for "not words, but acts," to prove Soviet sincerity.

Reaction in other European capitals included:

Vienna—Austrian officials repeated their earlier statement that, if Russia wants to cooperate she can demonstrate it when Austrian treaty talks reopen next week in London.

Rome—The Italian Foreign Office said that "a meeting between the two men is always something to be wished."

Frankfurt—American occupation officials in Germany said they were still unalterably opposed to any delay in formation of a west German state, even if Russia consents to lift the blockade of Berlin. If Truman asks their advice, they said, they would urge him to "stand firm."

Sofia—The Bulgarian Communist newspaper Rabotnichesko Delo commented that Stalin "has pointed out a peaceful path."

Acheson Analysis of Stalin Proposal to Meet Truman

Following is a partial text of Secretary of State Acheson's statement on Premier Stalin's replies to a correspondent's questionnaire:

I suppose except for the preservation of our nation and of our liberties, there is no matter more fundamental to the American people than the preservation of peace. I say this because it is a matter not only fundamental but sacred in America, and neither our people nor any of our representatives would play international politics with a matter of this importance.

The hopes of hundreds of millions of people throughout the world are pinned on the preservation of peace. No man of conscience would tamper with those hopes or use the raising or lowering of them as a pawn in a maneuver.

Now, with those observations, I wish to talk about these questions and answers quite candidly but quite realistically.

(Here Acheson read the correspondent's first question and Stalin's reply indicating he would "be prepared to consider" a joint Russian-U. S. declaration denying the intention to make war.)

NOW, I confess I find this answer puzzling. Both the Soviet Union and the United States and all other members of the United Nations are pledged by the most solemn treaty commitments not to engage in war against one another . . .

The President of the United States in his inaugural address stated that it was the position of his Administration and of the people of the United States to give unfaltering support to the United Nations. He did not say that he was prepared to consider making that statement. He made it. So as I say, this answer is a puzzling one. So far as commitment is concerned, so far as the most solemnly pledged word is concerned, I had thought that we had long passed the point at which this answer seems to stick.

(Here Acheson read the second question and Stalin's reply that Russia "naturally" would cooperate toward disarmament.)

Now, "naturally" means, "in the nature of things" and the nature of things in the past three years since the end of hostilities has not been such as to encourage the expectation of the cooperation which is indicated in this answer. The United States . . . led the way by a demobilization after the last war which was not gradual but was precipitant. This country disbanded the greatest assemblage of armed force which had ever been put together in the world before. Not only is this true but this Government, together with all the other governments represented upon the Security Council, with the unhappy exception of the Soviet Union, did their best to implement those paragraphs and articles of the charter which first of all, were designed for the peaceful settlement of disputes, and secondly, for the provision of an international armed force which would give authority to the United Nations.

THE use of the veto has frustrated the first effort. Obstruction of the USSR in the military committees has frustrated the second effort. The United States went still further.

In the atomic energy commission of the United Nations, it led the way in an attempt to put under international control the most destructive weapon and the most destructive force which man has yet devised. Here again these efforts of many nations were frustrated by Soviet action . . .

Now, I mention these points, not to score in a debate in which I have no interest, but to point out that in the nature of things, the other nations have not received and have little reason to expect the cooperation which is indicated in that answer . . .

Now I should like to take up out of order the fourth question because it relates to the first two.

Here Acheson read the fourth question and Stalin's reply that he had "no objection" to a peace meeting with President Truman.

Now you will notice that the purpose of the meeting has to do with the arrangements of which I have already spoken; that is, considering issuing a declaration regarding a matter which is already the subject of solemn treaty commitment. The White House spokesman reminded you, in answer to questions, of the fact that President Truman has on numerous occasions stated that he would be pleased to have Premier Stalin visit the United States and visit the President in Washington.

Now in this connection . . . the Government of the United States would not discuss with any nation any matter which was of direct interest to other nations without the participation of the representatives of those other nations. This is not a new or startling doctrine. There have been many statements of it.

THIS morning we have still a further development. There has been a new question and answer. We gather from that exchange that Premier Stalin is unhappily prevented by the condition of his health from coming to Washington because he cannot travel either by sea or air. He thus seems to be effectively grounded. The implication of this answer perhaps is that the President of the United States for the fourth time should travel half-way around the world to meet Premier Satlin and on this occasion to do so for the purpose of talking with him on a matter so tenuous that it defies specific statement. I think that concludes the comment on that question and answer.

(Here Acheson read the third question and Stalin's reply that he saw "no objection" to lifting the Berlin blockade on condition the Western powers postpone organization of western Germany and end their counterblockade of the Soviet zone. He then reviewed the situation in Berlin and the numerous efforts to reach an understanding.)

During all of this time the reasons which were given by the Soviet government were first of all that there were technical difficulties which interrupted transport. Then the reason was given that the blockade was necessary to protect the economy of the Soviet zone against the results of a monetary reform in the western zone . . .

During all of these months the three Western powers have tried patiently and persistently to solve the difficulties which have been put forward by the Soviet governmen as the reasons for the blockade.

AS TO THE second point in this answer made by Premier Stalin—that he would expect that if Soviet restrictions were lifted the Western restrictions would be lifted—that point has been made clear from the start. The Western governments have always stated that if the Soviet government permits normal communications with and within Berlin their counter measures will, of course, be lifted.

There are many ways in which a serious proposal by the Soviet government to restore normal interzonal communications and communications with and within Berlin could be made. All channels are open for any suggestions to that end. The United States, together with the other Western occupying powers, would, of course, consider carefully any proposal made to solve the Berlin problem consistent with their rights, their duties, their obligations as occupying powers.

As I say, all of the normal channels are open. I hope you will not take it amiss if I point out that if I on my part were seeking to give assurance of seriousness of purpose I would choose some other channel than the channel of a press interview.

May I end this statement as I began it, by stating that the interest of the United States and of all the hundreds of millions of people throughout the world in peace is so fundamental that the matter of peace cannot be tampered with and cannot be used as an instrument in any international political maneuver. It will not be so used by the United States.

Reds Seeking To Stir Riots Against West

Berlin, Feb. 2 (AP).—Communist agents in Germany are urging mass demonstrations against the western Allies' occupation policies, even as new reports of Soviet peace moves come out.

Soviet support, "in word and deed," was promised today by the Russian-sponsored German Communist People's Council.

Throughout Soviet-occupied eastern Germany, trade unions sent out statements protesting the three-month jail sentence meted out by a British court yesterday to Max Reimann, western Germany's Communist boss, for making an inflammatory speech.

Even the Moscow radio joined in. "The action against Reimann has opened the eyes of millions of Germans, awakened them out of their lethargic sleep and revealed to them who are their enemies and who their friends," a Moscow broadcast said.

man, brought a stern reminder from Acheson that the United States would not hold two-power discussions on any subject of direct interest to other nations.

Finally, the Secretary rebuked the Russians for choosing to make their proposals through a press interview. He also said the universal desire for peace was too deep and too sacred to be used "as an instrument of any international political maneuver."

So far the Secretary had been talking extemporaneously to about 150 press and radio reporters from many countries. Under questioning, he said he was not imputing motives to anybody.

His purpose in making his statement, he said, was to show that American policy was very clear and did not change from day to day because of press statements.

He said he had not been in direct communication with President Truman yesterday on the subject of the Stalin answers, but didn't think his own views were contrary to those of the President.

President Truman will have a news conference at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and will be asked for his own comment on the Stalin proposals.

Truman Deeply Regrets Dr. Weizmann's Illness

President Truman said yesterday he deeply regrets" that Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of Israel's State Council, is ill and will be forced to postpone his scheduled visit to the United States.

Weizmann, who had planned to come here this month, has been advised by his doctors to put ff the trip until April.

Better Standing For Reserve Urged

By C. B. Allen
NYHT News Service

Reserve components of the National Military Establishment will continue to receive step-child treatment from the "regulars" until Congress accords them the same official recognition and legal standing as the National Guard, Brig. Gen. E. A. Evans, executive director of the Reserved Officers Association of the United States, told the House Armed Services Committee yesterday.

General Evans said creation of an organized reserve counterpart of the long-established National Guard bureau in the Department of National Defense would be a fundamental "first step" toward rehabilitating and vitalizing the now disorganized reserves of the Army and Air Force.

He also urged permanent reserve representation in the Defense Department "on the Secretary level." At present only the Army, Navy and Air Force have civilian secretaries, and these, in turn, are subordinates of Defense Secretary James Forrestal, who is a member of the President's Cabinet.

Reckord Testifies

General Evans emphasized that the reserves lack the "legal standing" required to make them an effective force despite President Truman's directive to Secretary Forrestal last October to put them on an effective basis. The committees that have been appointed and the other moves that have been made to carry out these instructions, he said, offer no lasting solution of the problem.

Both General Evans and Maj. Gen. A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland and chairman of the National Guard Association's legislative committee, who preceded him as a witness, were asked by Representative Carl Vinson, Democrat, of Georgia, committee chairman, for their views on the authorized composition and strength of the Air Force, especially of its Guard and Reserve units. These are matters included in a bill introduced by Vinson to authorize an Air Force of 70 regular groups and the committee's hearings are being held on this proposed legislation.

Favors 35-Group Force

General Reckord said he believed that the Air National Guard, which has a present strength of 27 groups and 36,000 officers and men, should be permitted a maximum peacetime strength of "about 35 groups and 100,000 personnel." The Reserve's ceiling, he said, should be set at the same level, and the two organizations should be "treated alike."

General Evans first welcomed that proposal but later brought out that the Reserve now has 234,000 officers and 187,000 enlisted men in its ranks. He agreed with several members of the committee who suggested that Congress should "think twice" before cutting down such a reservoir of military training and combat experience to an arbitrary level of 100,000 reservists.

Interrogation of General Evans by committee members who served in the last war also brought out that there are many thousands of other veterans who have not yet signed up in the Reserve but might do so if it were rescued from its current doldrums.

report to Congress, but that "running to the press is another thing."

Lilienthal replied that "the responsibility of what is or what is not public information is met every day."

In defending the use of photographs in the report, Lilienthal remarked that "increases in the size of plants is something you can't conceal." He added that 60,000 persons are now employed in atomic energy activities.

Tydings at this point urged that the discussion be continued in executive session. "We may be inadvertently telling things we don't want to tell," he said. "In fact," he added, "I'm afraid we're getting pretty close to divulging information we don't want divulged.

"Every time we tell of a new airplane that flies so far and so fast," he went on, "we spur those we'll have to fight to match those planes."

Connally agreed, remarking that "it takes away a lot of strength and force atomic weapons give us to discuss them publicly."

Tydings urged that "we withhold all information about atomic weapons from everybody" until an executive meeting of the committee be held. He then added, with a significant glance around the room: "In the meantime we should impress the members of this commission not to be handing out interviews on this subject."

Connally agreed again with Tydings, and said: "I don't want to depend on what some man down is one of the bureaus wants to do or not to do."

Tydings declared that he would prefer to "err on the side of secrecy rather than publicity" and then returned to Lilienthal's report about the Brookhaven plant, in which it was stated that a weather tower there was the highest structure on Long Island.

Representative Carl Hinshaw, (D., Calif.) interrupted to remark: "If I was going to attack it (the Brookhaven plant) I'd be glad to know it was marked by the highest structure on Long Island."

Lilienthal declared that "this document was prepared in conjunction with the Military Liaison Committee of Atomic Energy," which caused Tydings to call on a young brigadier general in the room for comment. The officer pleaded that he was "only a member of the liaison staff—that any reply had to be by the committee chief.

Lilienthal explained that the pictures showed "no installations that have any other htan research operations." He declared there was nothing in the report that would help develop fissionable materials.

Tydings then declared that the report did reveal where atomic plants were and that the rules of war meant that if an enemy couldn't get atomic plants they should destroy them. "We're telling them where they are," he asserted.

Tydings suggested that future reports by the Atomic Energy Commission be screened by the Central Intelligence Agency, so as to "reduce to an irreducible minimum any benefit to an aggressor in this or any peaceful program."

What effect yesteday's hearing will have on Lilienthal's announced program for more public information about atomic energy operations, isn't clear. McMahon declared after a closed meeting of the committee Friday to consider the AEC quarterly "high secret" report, that other open hearings will be held, in spite of objections from some committee members.

Last Friday Lilienthal, in discussing his annual report with reporters, declared:

"We have been studying intensively for the last couple of years a redefinition of the areas of necessity of secrecy. This report is a turning point in that process. You will see that this is an extensive report.

"This will be followed by other reports, going into matters about which the people of this country should be informed and will be be informed.

"I would like to mention a few of these to indicate the background of the remark that this report represents a turning point in our effort to find a sensible answer to the problem of concealment versus openness.

"There will be a report on nuclear reactors for aircraft, probably by March 1. There will be . . . an extensive report on atomic power plants . . . and this probably by the middle of March.

"There will be a report on the very important subject of radioactive wastes . . . This will be perhaps in a month.

"There will be a fourth report which has been tentatively dubbed 'Atomic Weapons Effects Handbook.' This will be a handbook developed in cooperation with the military establishment, which is a long way toward completion."

In discussing the problems of secrecy at that time, Lilienthal declared that "without public knowledge of a nontechnical character, the principle of public accountability of public servants becomes very difficult, and almost impossible if carried to an extreme. It could actually blacken out democracy if carried to an extreme."

House Leaders Laud Beaman, Bill Drafter

Middleton Beaman, retiring legislative counsel of the House, drew warm praise yesterday from House leaders of both parties for his 30 years of service to Congress.

Actually it was 32 years, but the first two brought him no Government pay. Beaman was one of a group of Columbia University lawyers detailed to work under the legislative drafting research fund to show how trained lawyers might help Congress in drafting bills.

Then in 1919, Representative John Nance Garner, (D., Tex.) later Vice President, led a drive which resulted in setting up the House Legislative Counsel office, and Beaman went to work for it.

Upon his retirement, effective January 31, he directed a staff of nine lawyers and three clerks. Chief function of his office was to work with House committees in drafting the more difficult bills. Beaman's special attention was given to tax measures, and to matters like the Social Security Act, Securities Exchange Act. He also worked last year on the District home rule bill.

Beaman's successor is Allan Perley, 50, native of Washington who has been with the Legislative Counsel's office for 23 years.

Kingston, Jamaica, Feb. 2 (U.P.)—Baron Trefgarne, chairman of Britain's 400 million dollars colonial development corporation, disclosed today he was seeking a 15 million dollar loan from the International Bank for developing projects in British colonial possessions.

Baron Trefgarne said he expected to go to the United States in three weeks to complete the negotiations. He said it was purely a commercial proposition, and that if it was successful, other loans might be raised later.

West Point Stays Unruffled As First Nine Wacs Move In

By Claire Cox

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 2 (U.P.)—Nine pairs of khaki panties hung on a clothes line at the austere United States Military Academy today and this arsenal of masculinity surrendered without a whimper to femininity.

A shock force of nine Wacs invaded the 147-year-old academy last night.

The nine women, plus two officers who arrived earlier, are the first girls ever appointed to West Point. There will be 58 by the time Operation Silk Stocking is completed. All will replace men in medical and technical jobs.

The girls came fresh from basic training at Camp Lee, Va. Some of the academy's top brass was at the station to meet them—but there wasn't a cadet within winking distance.

Col. William S. Triplett stepped solemnly out of a shadow and saluted his new force. They didn't move a polished fingernail or raise a plucked eyebrow.

"Welcome to West Point," Triplett said solemnly. "We sent for you because we needed you and we are glad you are here."

Triplett saluted again. The Wacs giggled, and he beat a hasty retreat, leaving Capt. Edythe Robertson, Wac commander, to herd them off to quarters in the hospital.

The high brass said the girls could date cadets, whether plebes or upper classmen, and even officers, off the post.

"You can say we are going to let nature take its course," one officer said.

The girls will be medical and dental technicians and office workers 44 hours a week.

They are Betty J. Bailey, 22, Knoxville, Tenn.; Lois M. Dulin, 21, Birmingham, Ala.; Florence E. Robertson, 19, Roanoke, Va.; Dixie E. Russom, 21, Denver; Jewel A. Strutzenberg, 18, Chicago; Elizabeth M. Bartlow, 23, Vestal, N. Y.; Marjorie D. Hart, 18, California, Mo.; Mary L. Gilliam, 18, Des Moines, and Evelyn Cutting, 21, Mattoon, Ill.

The girls were afraid they weren't going to be wanted at West Point. But their fears melted when they discovered that the enlisted men who had made their beds had short-sheeted them.

"Gee," said Recruit Bailey. "They care. I could almost cry."

Congress Extends Scarce Goods Act

An act extending for seven months the program of voluntary industry allocation of scarce materials went to the White House yesterday after final House action. The Senate passed it Monday.

President Truman had requested the extension measure pending congressional consideration of his request for the Government to have compulsory allocation authority.

The voluntary plan was first adopted by the Eightieth Congress after it refused compulsory powers sought by Mr. Truman.

House, like Senate passage, was without opposition since it was favored by both Democrats and Republicans.

Sponsored by Eightieth Congress

GOP spokesmen, however, were careful to point out that the first anti-inflation act of the new Truman Administration was adoption of a measure sponsored by the GOP-controlled Eightieth Congress.

Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio), who has a powerful voice in House Republican councils, predicted that the voluntary program would never be replaced by the compulsory controls sought by Mr. Truman.

Congress is taking a close look at the request for compulsory controls and also at the Administration's proposal that wartime export controls be renewed for another 28 months.

Both Chairman Burnet Maybank (D., S. C.), of the Senate Banking Committee, and Representative John Sparkman (D., Ala.), usually Administration supporters, have expressed doubts of the plan to continue export controls.

Of Benefit to Neither

They have complained that farm surpluses had been permitted to pile up in this country without benefit either to farmers or consumers.

The Commerce and Agriculture Departments yesterday promptly met some of these objections by easing up on export regulations affecting farm products.

Samuel Anderson, ECA director, yesterday disclosed to the Banking group that the Administration has a top-secret list of commodities it is trying to keep from behind the iron curtain.

ECA, he said, is trying to get western European nations to prohibit shipment to Russia or its satellites of materials marked 1-A by the military establishment.

GWU Hospital Head

Schmelzer Will Join Public Health

Leo G. Schmelzer, superintendent of George Washington University Hospital, is resigning to take a new position with United States Public Health Service, it was announced yesterday.

Schmelzer

In his new position, he will serve as Chief of Hospital Services. His duty will be to direct research into administration and management of community hospitals aided by Federal funds under the Hill-Burton Act.

Schmelzer will continue at GWU Hospital for "several" weeks pending appointment of his successor.

The hospital superintendent joined the university staff in December, 1944, coming here from the State of Wisconsin General Hospital, Madison, Wis., where he had served as administrator.

Schmelzer is president-elect of the Maryland-District of Columbia-Delaware Hospital Association, and has been a fellow in the American College of Hospital Administrators since 1938.

AFL Asks Congress to Provide Billion for Aid to Education

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2.—The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor today asked Congress to provide one billion dollars in Federal aid to education.

The AFL leaders, holding their winter session here, declared the proposed 300 million dollars aid bill now being considered by congressional committees as inadequate to assure an effective program.

"The shortcomings of our present educational system are a reflection upon our American democracy which must have a well-educated and well-informed citizenry," the council declared.

"Surely the education of our children is the soundest and most constructive investment we can make for the future of our people and our democracy."

One of Broad Program

The AFL's request for the billion dollar education fund is one of a broad program of "social justice legislation to strengthen and fortify the American way of life" to be sought in the Eighty-first Congress.

The program also includes:

4. Social security measures to increase present benefits, widen present coverage, institute disability insurance, inaugurate a national health program—including health insurance, medical research, expanding health facilities and training more personnel.

2. Nationalization of the present state-controlled unemployment compensation system.

3. Raising the present 40 cents an hour minimum wage to $1 an hour. The Administration has recently asked Congress to raise the floor on wages to 75 cents an hour.

4. Complete support for President Truman's Civil Rights program.

The AFL council went into some detail on its proposed billion-dollar aid to education.

More Pay For Teachers

The aid should include, the council said, substantial increases in public school teachers' salaries to attract and hold efficient well-trained teachers in the schools.

The funds also should be used to promote health and welfare of school children, including school lunch programs and payments to qualified State agencies to enforce attendance laws; scholarships and loans to needy and qualified students; new construction to eradicate school slums; and help to the States in eradicating illiteracy.

The council defended its "social justice" legislative program against "oft-repeated charges of reactionary elements" that such legislation is "socialistic" or destructive to American freedoms.

"On the contrary," the AFL executive council declared, "the program will not only provide for greater enjoyment of freedom and economic opportunity to all the American people, but will also serve to buttress and support the free enterprise system to the extent that real social security is provided for the American people, the free enterprise system will become correspondingly secure against ideological attacks."

The council today announced unalterable opposition to the appointment of Walter Schevenels, Belgian trade unionist, as secretary of the Trade Union advisory committee of the European Recovery Program. Schevenels was until recently a top official in the World Federation of Trade Unions, from which the CIO recently withdrew because the WFTU had become under domination of the pro-Communist satellite nations, and opposed the Marshall Plan.

Other Reports by Green

Elsewhere on the international labor front, AFL President William Green reported that:

The AFL is putting up $1000 for the defense of trade unionists "being persecuted by the military dictatorship in Peru." Also, the AFL is looking into similar persecution in Venezuela.

Five trade unionists from both France and Italy are being brought to the United States by the AFL for a two months study period. The AFL is pleased with the excellent results from a similar visit recently by German union leaders.

The AFL council has thus far put off discussion on repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and proposed substitute legislation, awaiting the arrival of George Harrison, president of the Railway Clerks Brotherhood, for a report on the legislation. Harrison is believed to have had a hand in writing the Administration bill. Meanwhile, President Green is holding off testifying on the legislation but plans to make a last-minute appearance before the Senate Labor Committee hearings end, as scheduled, February 10.

West Germany 'Open'

Frankfurt, Feb. 2 (NYHT).—Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, British military governor, today pledged that the reviving trade and industry of western Germany will be protected against any discriminatory measures now being demanded by competitive English and American businessmen.

Clark Cites President's Power

Department attorney appearing with Tobin, said the Attorney General was referring to the President's inherent powers, saying again that there was no intention to provide for injunction procedure in the bill.

Taft said he knew of no inherent right of the President to get an injunction in an emergency and suggested the committee write into the bill specific authority for Mr. Truman to get an injunction. He asked Tobin if he favored that.

"I do not," replied Tobin. He said the purpose of the bill was to reinstate conditions that prevailed under the Wagner Act.

Clark's opinion apparently stemmed from the President's discretionary powers coupled with a statutory mandate in the bill requiring parties to a dispute to continue operations during the 30-day cooling-off period after the President proclaims a national emergency exists or threatens because of a labor dispute in a vital industry.

The Attorney General said "the inherent power of the President to deal with emergencies that affect the health, safety and welfare of the entire Nation is exceedingly great.

"Title 3 of the bill addresses itself affirmatively to solving the underlying labor dispute, and not merely to the sterile maintenance of the status quo through the medium of the courts.

"Since these sections of the bill primarily consist of a procedure for resolving the substantive matters in dispute, it may be expected that, in most instances, differences will be settled quickly, and that no recourse to the courts will be necessary.

"Should, however, the parties not obey the mandate of Section 302(c) of the bill, and should this result in a national crisis, it is my belief that in appropriate circumstances, the United States would have access to the courts to protect the national health, safety and welfare.

"I say this because it is my belief that access to its own courts is always available to the United States, in the absence of a specific statutory bar depriving the Government of the right to seek the aid of the courts in such critical situations.

"Particularly is this true where, as in the proposed legislation, a statutory obligation is placed upon the parties requiring them to continue or resume operations during a specific period. This bill, as I read it, does not purport to circumscribe the rights of the United States in this respect."

Earlier Taft opened a fight to write a large chunk of the Taft-Hartley law back into the Administration's bill.

As the Senate Labor Committee drove into its first night hearings, Taft grilled first NLRB Chairman Paul M. Herzog and then Secretary Tobin on the provisions of his own act discarded by the President.

In a noisy exchange, Taft tried to get Tobin to recant earlier charges that the Taft-Hartley law interferes with free collective bargaining but Tobin vigorously reasserted that it did.

He won from Herzog, however, reluctant admissions that he did not seriously object to such provisions as the "free speech" for employers section, a requirement that unions bargain collectively like employers, and authority for employers to call an election in a plant where a union is seeking recognition.

Tobin himself told Taft that "90 per cent of the harm" from the Taft-Hartley Act stemmed from the law's complete ban on secondary boycotts.

"Why repeal the rest, then?" shouted Taft. "There are 20 other provisions."

The committee moved into "day and night" sessions after Republican members lost a party-line fight to block meetings at night. The vote was 5 to 4 against a motion by Senator Donnell who said it is "impossible to do that and keep up with our work."

Epithets flew during the angry wrangle, and Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) charged an effort to spin out the hearings with "informal filibusters." Senator Morse countered that the record should show "what we are up against is steamroller tactics."

Tempers crackled again when Tobin, who had waited patiently all day to return to the stand for cross-examination, finally was called at 5 p. m.

Tobin said he wanted to make a statement first. Then he said he was sorry that a witness before the committee repeated the "myth" that the Labor Department "lacks impartiality."

He was referring to yesterday's testimony by Director Cyrus Ching of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, who flatly opposed the proposal to transfer his agency to the Labor Department.

Senator Donnell denied Ching had charged partiality and Chairman Thomas said Ching's statement was "in the realm of implication."

Tobin changed his statement to read "implication of lack of impartiality" and asserted "the interest of good government in the field of labor relations" requires the Conciliation Service merger.

Donnell again denied Ching even "implied" Labor Department partiality, but Tobin insisted on making his statement. He said he was advised Mr. Truman was "fully in accord" with his position.

Taft immediately tangled with Tobin on the Secretary's assertion Monday that the Taft-Hartley Act interfered with free collective bargaining and emphasized individual bargaining instead.

Tobin restated his position this way: "You have taken away from collective groups traditional rights they have always had."

"I deny that completely," retorted Taft. "What traditional rights have been taken away?"

"Economic secondary boycotts," said Tobin.

"That's not a traditional right," replied Taft.

Taft said the Taft-Hartley act "limited the scope of collective bargaining somewhat . . . but your bill does that, too" by outlawing "unjustified" secondary boycotts.

"In a helpful way," agreed Tobin.

"In a helpful way to union leaders!" said Taft.

Food Price Protests Hit

Consumers have been doing more howling about high food prices than is justified, says the Agriculture Department.

It issued a food marketing report yesterday which took sharply to task those who criticize farmers, food processors and distributors.

Food consumers are better off, the department declared, than their protests indicate. Agreeing that prices have risen sharply since before the war, the agency said incomes have increased even more.

The department said the figures prove that point. An average family has been paying, it said, only 21 per cent of its income for the same quantity of representative foods for which it had to spend 23 per cent before the war.

The department conceded that there is room for improving the efficiency of the food processing and marketing system.

"But improvements will not result," it declared, "either from indiscriminate abuse of middlemen or from any mere squeezing of profits."

The Department saw more room for cutting marketing costs in the retail end than in the farm marketing and processing end.

Nevertheless, processors and food handlers have greatly increased their efficiency since before the war, the report said. Cited as proof was that marketing charges have not advanced as much as wage rates of persons employed in marketing agencies.

Big supermarkets, with their self-service systems, were credited with having done more than any recent development in the food industry to lower marketing costs.

Filibuster Bill Vote Put Off

"compromise" they may offer, Gillette moved adjournment.

Chairman Hayden said it was impossible to predict whether the committee will act on the matter at its regular meeting next Wednesday, but said it will be the pending business. He again voiced belief that the committee has the votes to approve a two-thirds cloture resolution, however.

Knowland, echoed the views of the recent Senate Republican conference, that unless the rules change is called up in the Senate early in the session, other legislation will crowd it off the floor.

In the committee vote on postponement, Senator Myers was the lone Democrat voting with Republicans against further delay. The Republicans voting "No" were Senators Knowland, Lodge (R., Mass.), Jenner (R., Ind.), and Ives (R., N.Y.).

Democrats voting to adjourn were Hayden, Gillette, Green of Rhode Island (by proxy), Stennis (Miss.), Long (La.), Hunt (Wyo.), and Withers (Ky.).

Tighter ECA Cargo Rulings Projected

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Administration backing of "strong" legislation to require that 50 per cent of all ECA cargoes be carried in American merchant ship was decided on yesterday at a White House conference.

ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman and Rear Admiral W. W. Smith (retired), chairman of the Maritime Commission, will appear before the House Merchant Marine Committee today in support of such legislation, it was learned last night.

Smith told The Washington Post that he and Hoffman will propose some amendments to the Bland bill to make it more flexible and give some discretion to officials charged with administering it.

The decision ends a long undercover fight within Administration circles, and represents a victory for the maritime unions and shipping interests.

Hoffman has been represented as opposed to the plan. Late last year, he announced cancellation of an ECA requirement that 50 per cent of bulk cargoes be carried in American bottoms.

Immediate protests from Congressmen, maritime unions and ship charterers forced postponement of the effective date of the order.

Chairman S. O. Bland (D., Va.) of the House Merchant Marine Committee introduced "ironclad" legislation to force the ECA to maintain the 50-50 cargo ratio. The existing ECA carries a 50 per cent proviso, but Hoffman had ruled that it did not require bulk cargoes to be carried at American shipping rates, which run higher than those of other nations.

Hearings Under Way

Hearings on the bill and a companion measure to extend the authority of the Maritime Commission to charter Government-owned vessels to American operators largely engaged in carrying ECA bulk cargoes have been under way for several days. The existing charter authority expires the end of this month.

Sponsors of the two measures hope to rush them through Congress before the latter-named act expires. Senator Warren Magnuson (D., Wash.), chairman of the merchant marine subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee, has been sitting in on the hearings in order that lengthy Senate committee consideration of the legislation will not be necessary.

Opponents have charged the move is a "tramp steamer subsidy" and urged more thorough consideration of the entire program by Congress.

As introduced, the Bland bill requires that 50 per cent of all United States financed cargoes be shipped in American Flag line vessels at United States rates, regardless of whether they originate in this country. It establishes the 50-50 ratio country by country and commodity by commodity, and puts enforcement in the hands of the Maritime Commission rather than ECA.

The amendments agreed upon yesterday leave enforcement with the Maritime Commission. Attending yesterday's meeting were members of the commission, Hoffman, Congressman Bland and Dr. John Steelman.

Jury Issue

Reds' Claim Is Refuted By Medina

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina said today counsel for 11 Communist leaders have failed thus far to prove their contention that the jury-picking system here is discriminatory. He said their evidence "seems to wind up in utter confusion."

Not only that, he told defense lawyers, but it would be impossible to pick any juries at all on the basis of data presented by the defense.

The defense attorneys charge that the method of picking juries in the New York Federal District favors the rich against the poor and members of minority groups, including Jews and Negroes.

To prove their claim, they have submitted a long series of charts and tables designed to prove that jurors have been picked from certain wealthy sections out of proportion to less rich areas. Because of the alleged discrimination, the defense contends the indictment against their clients should be voided.

Richard F. Gladstein, a defense lawyer, said that if the selection was made "fairly and squarely you'd have no trouble." He added: "You'd get representation from all groups." To this, Medina replied:

"You assume by proving this long series of speculations that you prove a corrupt system of jury selection.

"It doesn't seem to me to prove that. It tends to prove that there is not proportional representation and the law in many cases has said there need not be proportional representation on juries."

The 11 Communists, all members of the American Party's national committee, are charged with conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the United States Government.

Before the trial was resumed today, Medina talked in his chambers with a delegation from four CIO unions.

Sol Reinstein, of the United Shoe Workers Union, said the group visited the judge to take up the question of what he called the "rigged" jury system.

He said a poll of his union and others represented in the meeting showed that no member ever had been called for Federal jury service. Others represented were the United Office and Professional Workers, the United Public Workers, and the United Furniture Workers.

Later three other CIO unions tried to intervene in the trial by asking permission to present briefs and arguments on the jury system. They were told to submit their briefs next Monday.

They were the Fur and Leather Workers, the Mine, Mill and Shelter Workers, and the Food, Tobacco, Agricultural and Allied Workers.

Small Newspapers Ask Wage Level Exemption

Ed M. Anderson of Brevard, N. C., representing the National Editorial Association, yesterday asked Congress to exempt newsboys and small newspaper job trainees from any bill increasing the national minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour.

He suggested, to the House Labor Committee, an amendment exempting any small newspaper whose major circulation is within the county where it is published.

Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) opposed a 35-cent increase and suggested that the new wage be geared to the cost of living.

American Airline Strike Averted By Wage Boost

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—A wage hike today averted a strike on American Airlines.

The CIO Transport Workers Union said two of its largest locals, in Tulsa, Okla., and New York, had voted to accept a company offer of an 8-cent hourly wage lift.

The TWU said it expected other locals in Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, Los Angeles, Dallas and Fort Worth, Tex., to approve the offer.

The wage boost hikes to $1.72 the average hourly rate for the mechanics, maintenance men and storage workers, affected. The workers also gained improvements in working conditions, the union said.

Several hours later the TWU said wage negotiations with Pan American had broken down. This dispute involves 500 stewards, stewardesses and pursers. A company spokesman denied negotiations had been cut off and said both parties are "on call" of a Federal mediator.

6 Killed, 4 Injured In Canada Plane Crash

Trinity Bay, Quebec, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Six persons were killed and four seriously injured tonight when a St. Lawrence Airlines plane crashed on takeoff at an airfield 1 mile from this small community on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River.

The pilot, a mechanic and four passengers were killed. The four other passengers aboard the plane were seriously injured. Trinity Bay is about 240 miles northwest of Quebec.

Negotiators Ask Board to 'Dispose' Of Rail Dispute

Chicago, Feb. 2 (UP).—Negotiators for the Nation's railroads and 16 unions, in an unprecedented move, today asked a presidential fact-finding board to reconvene to "dispose" of their wage-hour dispute. Board members agreed to meet at 10 a. m. Monday.

The action apparently ruled out any threat of a Nation-wide strike by one million nonoperating railroad workers.

Negotiators said that neither the railroads nor the unions necessarily would be bound by the views of the fact-finding board.

The board, appointed by President Truman last October, already has recommended a 7-cent hourly pay raise for the workers and a cutback in the work week from 48 to 40 hours. These proposals were used as the basis for renewed negotiations January 5.

At Least 112 Died In January Storms

By The Associated Press

Severe weather during January in the Western half of the Nation caused at least 112 deaths, possibly 50 million dollars in damage to fruit and vegetable crops and untold millions of dollars property damage, a survey showed Wednesday.

The January blizzards, bringing one of the most damaging midwinter in history to Western States, accounted for the principal damage.

Storms damage to personal property, transportation and communication equipment has not been determined. The livestock loss probably will not be known until spring.

Main Blizzard Areas

The main force of the blizzards struck Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, Nebraska, Montana, upper California and into the lower California region, North and South Dakota and northern Arizona. Texas, Washington, Oklahoma and Iowa also felt the edge of the snowstorms.

Relief and rescue work by the Federal and State governments the Red Cross, the Army, Navy and Air Force involved millions of dollars in emergency funds and staggering amounts of snow-moving equipment, food, fuel and medical supplies.

The deaths attributed to the cold and snow included Texas 27; Nebraska 20; Wyoming 13; Colorado 15; Washington 8; Iowa 6; Montana 5; California 4; Utah, Missouri and North Dakota 3 each; Kansas 2; Arizona, Oklahoma and South Dakota 1 each.

The damage to citrus and vegetable crops runs into the millions of dollars—30 million dollars in California alone.

The job of saving the thousands of cattle and sheep which were snowbound on the western rangelands by January blizzards still is not finished. Neither is the huge task of bringing relief to the thousands of marooned ranchers and Indians. The emphasis in the western blizzard belt still is on relief operations—not on counting the losses.

Livestock Losses Estimated

In Wyoming out of an estimated 775,000 cattle and 1,500,000 sheep the estimated losses run from 50,000 to 60,000 cattle and 105,000 to 110,000 sheep.

In Nevada, approximately 65,000 cattle and 100,000 sheep had been stranded 10 days without food before the haylift operations started. Indications are that 50 per cent of the cattle will be lost but losses of sheep may not be determined until after warmer weather and the lambing season.

In Nebraska, one of the States hardest hit by the blizzards, A. E. Anderson, State-Federal crop statistician said the damage "still lies under several feet of snow."

There were reports of losses of wildlife in some of the Western States—including deer, elk and quail. Loss of quail and pheasants was reported heavy in Nebraska.

There were countless cases of hardship, especially in the western blizzard area. There also were innumerable stories of heroic rescues. Many isolated communities in Nebraska have been receiving supplies by airlift for nearly a month. Gordon, Nebr., was snowbound for 12 days and only three trains entered the community during January. Chamber, Nebr., had contact with outside communities only 10 days during January.

Other Crop Damage

In addition to California the heaviest damage to crops were in the citrus belts of Arizona and the lower Rio Grande valley of Texas. The Arizona losses were estimated at more than two million dollars and were expected to run into the millions in Texas.

The ice and sleet storms which whipped across many Southwestern and Midwest States caused heavy damage. The Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. said damage to its lines in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas was $7,500,000 since January 9. In Iowa, the Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. estimated damage to its lines from storms at $300,000.

There appeared no severe damage to winter wheat in the storm swept States.

Joe Louis Firm Denied Permit For Beer Sale

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—A wholesale beer license was denied today to a firm headed by Joe Louis and "Sugar Ray" Robinson on the ground that a company controlled by a member of the old Al Capone gang holds stock in the firm.

The State Liquor Authority said it believed Louis and Robinson "unwittingly allowed their names to be used by persons of evil design." It said the integrity of Louis and Robinson is unquestioned.

The Louis-Robinson firm is World Champions, Inc. Louis, world heavyweight boxing champion, is president and Robinson, welterweight champion, is chairman of the board.

The SLA said the Canadian Ace Brewing Co., Inc., controlled by Alexander Louis Greenberg, a former Capone associate, holds stock in World Champions.

Under the name of the Manhattan Brewing Co., the Chicago firm once was owned by Capone, the authority added.

The SLA said it believed Canadian Ace "had planned to use both Louis and Robinson in an attempt to 'push their beer' in New York State."

Ben Hogan Hurt in Crash

year-old National Open and P.G.A. champion was injured, occurred near Kent, Tex., 150 miles east of here, as the Hogans were en route to their new home in Fort Worth.

The Hogans were driving from Phoenix, Ariz., where on Monday he was defeated by Jimmy Demaret in a playoff for first money in the Phoenix Open.

The sheriff at Kent said the westbound bus swung out to pass a truck.

"Ben tried to swerve out of the way to miss the bus but there was a culvert on the roadside and we couldn't," Mrs. Hogan added.

In the confusion, no one called an ambulance for 90 minutes after the crash, Mrs. Hogan said.

1948 Golfer of the Year

Five-time leading money winner among the professionals, and four-time winner of the Vardon Trophy for low scoring over an entire tournament year, Hogan last year was the "golfer of the year."

He was the first man since Gene Sarazen in 1922 to win the Open and the PGA and the only man ever to add the Western Open. He led the money winners with $32,112.

8 Boys in Teens Held Here in 40 Burglaries

Eight boys ranging in age from 12 to 15 were in custody yesterday in connection with about 40 local housebreakings in the past two months.

They confessed to 30 of the housebreakings, according to police and probably are implicated in at least 10 more. They have broken into so many places they have forgotten the location of all of them, police said.

Police Pvts. M. E. Pitts and L. G. Kragh in Scout Car 31 arrested three of the boys Tuesday night. After questioning they implicated five other boys.

Pitts and Kragh discovered a crowbar wedged in a rear window of the Craven & Co. hardware store, 1919 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Third Precinct police had received a telephone report from an unidentified woman that boys were behind the store.

The boys fled when the policemen approached, but were captured when they attempted to hide on the roof of the building.

Police Close on 2 Who Shot Private

Police announced late yesterday they believe they have information that will lead them to the two men who shot Police Pvt. Shelton H. Nuttall, jr., 35, Tuesday night.

Police launched a manhunt after the shooting and rounded up 127 persons for questioning during visits to criminal haunts and dives in the neighborhood. Late yesterday all but three men had been released.

Police said they do not believe the three men still held are directly involved but believe they have information as to the identity of the men who shot Nuttall.

Ground-Hog Science

At the risk of further offending the weatherman, who, as everyone should know, is a hard-working and lovable if sometimes exasperating character, we think it wise at this juncture not to overlook the admonition implicit in yesterday's action of the ground hog or, to be strictly scientific, marmota monax. Washington newspapers have amply recorded the fact that the ground hog at the Washington Zoo saw his shadow—or would have if he had been coaxed out of his den. In deference to his shyness he was photographed in his private quarters, well insulated from the sun. But the principle is the same, and we are not putting our red flannels away, on this sign that six more weeks of winter weather lie ahead. In this connection, Washingtonians are more fortunate than their neighbors in New York City, where no genuine specimen of marmota monax could be located for advice on the weather. With good reason, too. New Yorkers have abandoned the ground hog as a weather predicter in favor of the woolly bear caterpillar, and so the ground hog has abandoned them.

The ground hog's great advantage as a weather prophet is that he is not troubled by precipitation reports, barometric pressures or telegraphic summaries. He simply comes out of his hole and, if the sky is cloudy, presumably concludes that showers are probable and spring is here; or, conversely, if the sun is shining, decides that this is merely winter's deception and the advent of spring is not yet. This is, of course, a strictly matter-of-fact approach. It cannot rightfully be regarded as competition with the weatherman.

Report On The Atom

There is a negative sort of comfort in the knowledge that the United States now possesses atomic bombs of superior explosive power. One of the premises of our national security policy is that with unrelaxed world tension and the failure to obtain agreement on international control of atomic energy, the primary emphasis must remain on military applications. From this standpoint it is encouraging to have the assurance of the Atomic Energy Commission, in its fifth semiannual report, that by the end of 1948 our atomic energy program had attained a momentum which, if sustained, "will maintain and increase the Nation's lead in atomic energy development."

The danger always has been, however, that continued stress on atomic energy as a weapon would overshadow the other uses which may have even greater potential meaning for national strength and security. Military application is a necessary evil; but history may well prove that the real significance of atomic energy is as a source of power that can help resolve some of the world conditions that lead to war. The satisfying and remarkable thing about the Atomic Energy Commission report is not that it dwells on military use of the atom, but that it contains so many indications of progress in peaceful applications.

There are, for example, the nascent stirrings of applied atomic research in biology and medicine as well as fundamental research in physics and chemistry. Considerable publicity already has been given the production and use of radioisotopes for biological experiments as well as the tracing and treatment of diseases. Some 1406 radioisotope shipments were made during the last half of 1948. Extensive studies have been conducted on the effects of radiation on plant growth as well as on the genetics of living cells. The commission has supported cancer research by distributing radioactive substances free of charge as well as by giving financial and scientific support to selected cancer projects. Studies of radioactive cobalt indicate that it soon may be available as a cheap substitute for radium.

The fact is, of course, that the Atomic Energy Commission, because of its extensive operations in many fields, stimulates or controls much of the scientific research in the country today. Atomic energy is big business; it has cost the American people more than three billion dollars. There are some 1270 different installations connected with the atomic energy program. The very magnitude of the venture increases the importance of a policy calculated to make the freest possible use of information at the commission's disposal. This means not only the constant and conscientious declassification and publication of information, but also increasing liaison with industry to make sure that the full potentialities of new discoveries are realized and passed on to the public. The very fact that the United States is dependent on the Belgian Congo and Canada for the bulk of its uranium is itself a strong argument for not neglecting the broad peaceful development of atomic energy as a positive substitute for destructive use.

Atlantic Pact

Nothing has been discussed so freely on the basis of so little knowledge as the Atlantic Pact. The reference to which most comment is hinged occurs in the budget message and the inaugural address, but even here there is nothing but outline. The President puts the design of a North Atlantic security compact among his objectives—a design flowing from the authority of the Vandenberg resolution of the Senate pledging "association" with like-minded nations in Europe. He promises submission of a treaty based upon exhaustive conversations with the Atlantic nations, and the issue will then get an airing in the debate on ratification. Ratification would be followed by exports of "military supplies" out of the American arsenal. To quote the President, "a large measure of mutual aid and self-help" will be called for, and "every country participating in these arrangements must contribute all it can to the common defense."

The Atlantic Pact would thus tie our fortunes with western Europe's in the coordination of military establishments. With the recognition of a sink-or-swim-together link with western Europe we are heartily in sympathy. Our fear is not that the pact may go too far, but that it might not go far enough, and our wonder about the military attachment alone concerns the details. To what extent does the scheme require the manufacture and export of arms from America? Does it call for American military missions in all capitals? What is the manner and extent of the self-help required from the participating nations? To these questions no answer can be returned till the plan is submitted to Congress. Yet light is essential on these and other points before this particular alliance can be appraised as a political counterpart of the Marshall Plan or as an interference with and a divergence from it.

At present the signs of recovery in western Europe are as clear and as evident as are the signs of a recession of the fear of a Soviet inside or outside attack. Even the soft spot in France is hardening both politically and economically. But the revival is not yet firm and healthy enough to encourage optimism that the participating nations will be on their feet and independent by 1952. If, therefore, on top of a civilian program of self-help, there is superimposed a military program of self-help, recovery might be diluted if not altogether jeopardized. For arms to Europe would have to be maintained, since airplanes require airports, trucks need oil and parts and repair, uniforms require men, bases have to be supported. You can't have men making goods for export and guns for domestic use without impeding civilian output.

Moreover, an arms program might put a premium on military influence in western Europe. There might be a constant competition between military and civilian for supplies from America and for funds out of national budgets. The appointment of Mr. Ernest Gross as coordinator of civilian and military programs is not necessarily a safeguard. The military in western Europe would have an ally in claims on their governments in the American military missions which are said to be in contemplation for location in European capitals. The danger here, of course, is not comparable to that incurred in Latin America and in China, but it is a factor that must be considered nevertheless. And it is an imponderable aside from the danger of creating a satellite complex in western Europe on a par with that in eastern Europe.

The object of our policy in western Europe is to see the nations there grow not only in confidence and strength but also in cooperation. To militarize these countries is not to make them stronger, but, on the contrary, to make them weaker, depending upon the diversion of their energies into military channels. Military strength can come only from a pooling of their resources and a dovetailing of their strategy. But this is not observable either in the military committee set up by the Brussels Pact or in the Council of Europe about which there has been so much fanfare. The fact is that at bottom the nations have not yet yielded a jot of sovereignty in the common security. Accordingly, the prime objects of the American effort should be to press for a continental army and a continental general staff, standardization of arms, and specialization of function in the manufacture of defense weapons. As to this latter requirement, an illustration would be that all tanks for Europe be made, say in Belgium. With sucha dovetailing, a strain on national budgets would be avoided, armed security in western Europe would mean something, and the recovery program would not be in danger of frustration.

Backward Step

Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, made a strong argument for continued separation of that agency from the Department of Labor in his testimony before the Senate Labor Committee. As an independent agency, the FMCS has won the confidence of employers and unions alike. Mutual confidence in its fairness is imperative, of course, to success of its efforts. "How is the Department of Labor," Mr. Ching asked, "to convince the skeptical employers that it holds no brief for the unions with which they bargain?"

There are two theories as to the proper function of the Department of Labor. One holds that it is an impartial agency especially concerned with the relations between Government and labor. Efforts have frequently been made to place the department on this basis by choosing the Secretary of Labor from outside the ranks of the big unions and by making the department a service agency for labor instead of its mouthpiece. Under this sort of arrangement there was less complaint of bias on the part of the Conciliation Service within the Labor Department, although we suspect that the association was always a handicap to conciliation and mediation efforts. –

The second theory as to the function of the Labor Department was sharply illustrated recently by Secretary Tobin when he said, "I want a department that will be labor's voice in the President's councils." Now a department that is labor's voice is obviously not a suitable overseer for a service which is trying to settle disputes to which labor is a party. That seems so unmistakably clear that we are at loss to understand why Mr. Tobin should represent himself to labor as its voice and to Congress as a proper custodian of a supposedly impartial service. In the light of Mr. Tobin's own testimony on the new labor bill, we do not see how Congress can escape the force of Mr. Ching's conclusion that return of the Mediation and Conciliation Service to the Labor Department "would be a backward step in the terribly important job of strengthening our industrial democracy."

Air Groups Vs. UMT

Secretary Forrestal has indicated his support for a 70-group Air Force as an authorized goal to permit the orderly planning of air power. At the same time he has made clear the difference between authorized and actual strength. The latter is determined by appropriations. The 15-billion-dollar ceiling on defense spending set by President Truman would limit the Air Force to 48 groups during fiscal 1950. Presumably this limitation was arrived at after the President had weighed military estimates and defense needs against the requirements of the rest of the economy. Irrespective of any authorized Air Force goal for planning purposes, we believe that the 15-billion-dollar ceiling on appropriations must be respected in the absence of demonstrable reason to the contrary. As the Eberstadt report emphasized, a lot of defense can be obtained for 15 billion dollars.

It does not necessarily follow, however, that the precise division of funds outlined in the budget is sacrosanct. Take, for example, the requested appropriation of 800 million dollars for universal military training which some congressional advocates of increased air power are now seizing upon. The concept of universal training, in our opinion, is still desirable. But the draft, which is temporarily suspended, has obviated the current need for UMT. There is not the slightest chance that Congress will enact UMT this session; in fact, one may suspect that it was included merely as a stalking horse. The 800-million-dollar kitty could be diverted to increased air power, it seems to us, without harming the total defense or doing violence to the budget ceiling. If this would not permit expansion as rapidly as some zealots would like, it at least would allow continuation of the present rate of procurement without cutbacks that would injure the future production capacity of the aviation industry.

Probably it would be impossible to devote the whole sum directly to Air Force procurement, for the reason that revision upward would necessitate corresponding adjustment in the support strength of the other two services. It is a fiction, however, that a balanced defense means even distribution of funds between the three services. The totality of defense, like the totality of air power, is what is important. The concept which seemingly holds sway in certain nooks of the Pentagon that unification means equal shares of the pie for each service is a positive impediment to efficient and economical defense. One object of any reform of the Unification Act ought to be to end the unanimity rule on the Joint Chiefs of Staff that makes such horse-trading necessary.

Gallivanting

Secretary Acheson dealt effectively yesterday with the Stalin proposal that the President of the United States should journey to a location within handy distance of the Kremlin to discuss world peace. A Truman acceptance would be the fourth time we would have obliged Stalin. It is now his turn to accommodate President Truman, doctor or no doctor; and Secretary Acheson left no doubt as to his welcome, no matter what "tenuous" idea he has in mind, provided it is clearly understood that the United States does not intend bilaterally to discuss issues in which other countries are involved. Moreover, a paper pact to keep the peace would be a work of supererogation in view of the solemn commitments of both countries under the United Nations, at least on the part of America. In this reaction, Secretary Acheson, it seems to us, reflected American opinion. The Secretary also gave the Muscovite message the constructive attention that it deserved, especially the part relating to a settlement in Berlin. However, it is of little use any longer to complain about Stalin's unconventional approach. The Russians don't stand on ceremony, and any door is serviceable enough for a Russian entrance. Nor is it a Soviet invention to employ the press for trial balloons, if this was a trial balloon. Indeed, the custom is time-hallowed. The history of diplomacy is full of examples of this kind of trial ballooning by the most formal and correct chancelleries. The difficulty in dealing with Soviet Russia is to distinguish between a trial balloon and a propaganda vehicle, though when a valid point is raised, as it was in the matter of Berlin, the necessities require the seriousness which Secretary Acheson gave the Soviet demarche.

Army Justice

The recent acquittal of Capt. Joel G. Holmes by an Army court-martial of any neglect of duty at the Wurzburg prison camp brings to mind the token fine imposed upon Colonel Killian at a similar camp and the Ilse Koch fiasco. It also brings to mind the many thousands of harsh sentences imposed upon GIs for offenses much less serious.

All of the services have recently made a great show of reforming their systems of justice, and doubtless they have accomplished some good in this direction. Military justice lacks the most essential requisite to justice—an independent court.

Members of courts-martial are usually appointed by the various commanding officers. The basic function of such a court is the maintenance of discipline. In the usual court-martial, the result reached is the one which the officer-judges think their superiors desire.

With the esprit de corps that exists among career military officers, it is perfectly obvious that none of them are ever going to give each other more than token sentences at a court-martial. It is clear that if responsibility for the maintenance of such "hell holes" is ever to be pinned down, and if GIs are ever to be protected, the services themselves cannot be trusted to do the job. Congress should pass a law giving the Federal courts exclusive jurisdiction to try cases in which a commissioned officer is accused of an offense. This would insure the accused of an expert and impartial trial.

Health Insurance

In her address to the student body of Mount Holyoke College, published in The Washington Post January 27, Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer is quoted as saying that compulsory health insurance represents "a dangerous short cut to human welfare." The implications are a little hair-raising, but the arguments advanced to support this contention amount to little more than the statement, "I am against this proposal and urge you to be against it, too."

Mrs. Meyer says: "Democratic ends must be achieved by democratic means." What, then, is undemocratic in a system of prepayment for medical care which relieves the prospective patient of fear that he may become a victim of an illness, the treatment of which must be paid for by jeopardizing his share of other essential services and goods, or must be accepted as charity; which relieves physicians (most of whom we rightly suspect of having entered the practice of medicine because of the intellectual challenge of applying its scientific and humanitarian ideals) of the distracting intrusion of financial considerations into a profoundly intricate relationship which cannot be helped, and may be harmed, by such considerations?

When Mrs. Meyer says that ". . . our American democracy must resist the development of a vast, overroutinized, professional civil service . . ." she is indulging in sheer word-mongering which misrepresents the nature of the proposal which she is attacking; and a disregard of precise meanings is equally evident when she goes on to say ". . . as one of the worst forms of despotism which would destroy the cooperative, competitive, formative, democratic processes . . ."

Physicians, as members of a democratic society, should insist upon preservation of freedom of inquiry into medical problems and the right to have the results of their professional endeavors evaluated by their peers, so that erroneous ideas and practices may be discarded by all who value the truth and good conduct. Now this is essentially a system of cooperation. If any insist that it implies a competition of ideas, I shall grant the point.

It seems likely, however, that Mrs. Meyer was thinking of economic competition. I don't think she can find very many physicians who would step forward to affirm that the quality of medical services is dependent on the simultaneous operation of something akin to the profit motive.

Bishop Oxnam's Charges

As a reader of The Washington Post of long standing I have found it usually impartial in reporting news and describing important events. However, I am impelled to call your attention to a dispatch concerning the address of Bishop Oxnam delivered in Constitution Hall January 27.

The dispatch in question failed to inform its readers the source of information upon which Bishop Oxnam based his remarks. The writer heard Bishop Oxnam's address and would like to inform The Washington Post readers that Bishop Oxnam quoted from official Catholic sources, as the basis for his remarks.

Stalin's Answer

Mr. Kingsbury Smith's questions to Joseph Stalin were sent at a most unpropitious moment and are bound to do us and our allies incalculable harm. Not knowing the meaning of a free press, Stalin and his Politburo are interpreting this latest blunder as inspired by our State Department and surely not without the approval of President Truman. To the totalitarian Soviet rulers it is inconceivable that a newspaper reporter would dare approach the head of a foreign power, especially at a time when the relations between the two governments are so strained, without strict instructions to that effect.

The approach is, therefore, being interpreted in Kremlin circles as a sign of weakness on our part, as our coming hat in hand to beg for some form of a settlement. They also know that Stalin needs peace more than we. Having just swallowed China, he needs time to digest the victim before he is ready to pounce on the next one. Therefore, Stalin is the one that should be made to come to us with such approaches. If he wants a conference he should come to our shores, as Presidents Roosevelt and Truman did on three different occasions in order to accommodate Stalin.

All that Stalin did say was that "there is no objection to a meeting" and yet some of us are gullible enough to hail this as a step in the "right direction," as did Senator Austin, our delegate to U. N. This shows utter ignorance of the true nature of the Soviet rulers, whose avowed goal it is to destroy all peace-loving governments not conforming to the totalitarian brand of slavery created in the Soviet Union.

Control Of The Air

May I suggest that both Marshall Andrews (article of January 27) and Thomas G. Miller (letter of January 27) have missed the essence of their discussion of air power.

Mr. Andrews makes much of tactical airpower, which he does not define, but seems to conceive as something which supports foot soldiers. Mr. Miller makes much of strategic air power, which he likewise does not describe but seems to conceive of as consisting exclusively of large bombers.

I had thought it long since conclusively established that the sine qua non of air power was the ability to control the air wherever and for whatever purposes such control was needed.

What it takes to control the air depends upon where and for what purpose the control is needed. Until now the ultimate weapon for control of the air has been the fighter plane, followed at some distance by the antiaircraft gun.

Control of the air requires the ability to defeat or evade these ultimate weapons, and all the lesser weapons which dispute that control. To defeat antiaircraft it has been necessary to fly very high, greatly reducing the accuracy of bombing, or to fly very low in fast, maneuverable planes which retain accuracy at the expense of range.

To defeat enemy fighters various methods may be used. One is to avoid the problem by bombing through clouds or in darkness which, of course, merely multiplies the normal imprecision of bombing from altitude. Another is to bomb visually by daylight but to protect the bombers with other fighters; this, of course, greatly reduces the maximum bombing radius. A third is to destroy the enemy fighter defense force.

The latter, of course, requires air bases within fighter range of the enemy air force, which is where Mr. Andrews' foot soldiers come in. To secure and defend the bases they need close air support, to be sure, but what they need most is control of the air over their heads, which will not be gained by strategic bombers alone.

One must believe that the Air Force still believes in the necessity of controlling the air, since it maintains some 20 fighter groups, or roughly 1500 fighters, plus an Air National Guard composed largely of fighters. One must also pay some heed to General Spaatz, who led the strategic air campaign over Germany. Within the year I heard him clearly expound the thesis that this campaign was won by the combination of fighters and bombers, taking control of the air from the German air force as the necessary prerequisites to successful precision bombing, with supportable losses.

It is good to see Mr. Miller emphasize the importance of bombing selected target systems instead of attacking industry and urban areas indiscriminately. But Mr. Miller's rightful insistence on systems attack defeats his claim that a large strategic bombing force alone can guarantee quick and effective destruction of the enemy war potential. For systems attack requires precision attack, and precision attack requires daylight attack under visual conditions, and visual attack requires either fighter escort or prior destruction of the enemy fighter defense force.

Dr. Peter Marshall

As a member of the late Dr. Peter Marshall's church, I learned with profound grief, along with thousands of others, of his untimely passing. One cannot but question why in these days of miraculous operations which are written about as being quite simple for the correction of just such ailments as he had, and when practically all of his associates knew of his ailment, nothing was done to correct it.

Profoundly they all express their "great loss," but why didn't some of these friends and associates see to it and insist that he be given the corrective operation? Surely money could have been no obstacle to them, and while Dr. Marshall had the stubbornness of a normal Scot regarding anything that meant his own welfare, surely there must have been sufficient eloquence among all these friends to have persuaded him.

Roads To Treason

'Axis Sally's' Tempters

NO DEFENDANT ever seems so starkly alone as one being tried for treason. It is not only the threat of imprisonment or even death that hangs over Mildred Elizabeth Gillars (Axis Sally) in the small District courtroom, but also a sense of cold, eternal remoteness from an entire Nation she is accused of betraying.

Why did she put herself in such a spot? The few who hear her trial and the many who follow it in the news ponder the question. They grope in their minds to find how homes, communities, the Nation itself, can prevent Axis Sally tragedies in future.

Even those who solve all problems with the pat formula that the schools are to blame have not as yet brought out that Mildred Gillars was not properly taught the Constitution. Nor can her plight be dumped on the doorstep of that social scapegoat, the broken home, though her attorney has indicated that this—together with a Nazi Svengali—will figure in the defense.

MOST reasonable theory so far advanced is that Miss Gillars was badly stagestruck and that her ambition led her into the best job she had ever had—and one she was loath to relinquish—that of second highest paid announcer for Hitler's foreign radio. Here an analogy begins with other recent treason defendants, such as the exhibitionistic William Joyce (Lord Haw-Haw), tried and convicted by the British, and Douglas Chandler and Robert Best, who received life-imprisonment sentences in this country. There seems to have been a love of the spotlight in all of them, a theatrical quality that found its outlet on Hitler's radio, and gave them such personal satisfaction that they could easily delude themselves that they were acting from principle.

Hatred of Jews was the easiest emotional bridge to nazism for them. The next rationalization was fear of Bolshevism. Chandler, a magazine writer, was already a rabid anti-Semite and believer in racial supremacy, and he more than the others was influenced ideologically. With Best, a none-too-successful newspaper correspondent, and Miss Gillars, who had long hovered on the fringes of the theatrical world, opportunism seemed the main motive for their line-up with the enemy radio—though in her trial Miss Gillars is insisting, like Best, that she was trying to "help the United States." Chandler in his trial still stood up for his belief that democracy was decadent.

These Americans accused of abetting the Nazis seemed to have followed a somewhat different road from the reformed Communist spies, such as Elizabeth Bentley. The converted Communists were influenced by missionaries preaching a new world-wide religion—with headquarters incidentally in the Kremlin—which demanded of them secretiveness, duplicity, sacrifice, and gave them little mundane reward. Those drawn into the Nazi net responded to an approach that gave them outlet for their hatreds, fears, frustrations and the promise of future racial overlordship. It also offered them good pay in marks and world-wide publicity, in the interim.

MILDRED GILLARS is said to have been a Greenwich Villager while trying to break into the New York theater. That was in the 1920s, an era that produced many frustrated Bohemians and devotees of the arts. Like many of these, Miss Gillars wound up in Europe doing odd jobs here and there in the art, fashion and theatrical world.

Her best job came in 1940 on the German radio. After Pearl Harbor she stayed on. Without condoning what she did, one can see why. It was something for a girl of thwarted ambitions to be at last in the world spotlight—and well paid for it in the bargain.

Would she have done differently had she been effectively taught the meaning of the American system? Or if she had known enough science and had enough humanity to scorn Hitler's racialism? Or if she had possessed enough character not to be influenced by Nazi Svengalis or German marks?

Many influences have put her into the defendant's chair in a treason trial. Which was dominant no one can say. Possibly a theatrical delusion of grandeur that she possessed in common with Best, Chandler, Haw Haw—an attitude of personality formed early in life—was most to blame.

Today and Tomorrow

Mr. Bohlen On Agreements

LAST WEEK in an address to the New York State Bar Association the Counselor of the State Department, Mr. Bohlen, raised the crucial question in our relations with the Soviet Union. It is whether it is possible to make agreements that Russia will carry out. Mr. Bohlen's attempt to answer this question is of the greatest interest, not only because of his high responsibility and great influence but also because of his long study of the question.

Lippmann

He gave what appeared to be two contradictory answers. Early in the address he said that in view of the failure of the Soviet government "to live up to international commitments" it is "difficult to see what useful purpose would be served by acceding to pressure, for compromises on our part in order to achieve agreements of doubtful validity." . . . "until a fundamental change is made in that respect." But shortly thereafter he said that while "the deep cleavage" . . . "is not susceptible of being bridged by the magic of an agreement" . . . "this does not mean that the practical unresolved questions of the post-war world may not be progressively settled."

MR. BOHLEN did not explain how the practical unresolved questions can be settled when no useful purpose is served by agreements of doubtful validity. He seemed to be saying that there is no use making agreements but that practical questions can be progressively settled by agreements.

The key to Mr. Bohlen's difficulty is to be found, I think, in a sentence which followed immediately after his statement that practical questions may be progressively settled: "But we must clearly recognize that such agreements on practical questions as may be reached will not in themselves bring about a fundamental solution." What would be a fundamental solution? Other passages in his address make it quite clear that he means by a fundamental solution a change in "the profound doctrine" of the Soviet Union which denies that international law is "a universal concept applicable to all nations."

SINCE such a change in the profound doctrine is not to be expected, there can be no fundamental solution. How then can Mr. Bohlen believe that practical questions can be settled? He can believe it, I would suggest, because the history of the world is replete with examples of how practical questions can be settled though there is no fundamental solution of the conflicts of doctrine.

Indeed, it may be said that none of the great religious conflicts of mankind has been ended by a fundamental solution in Mr. Bohlen's meaning of the words—certainly not the conflict between the Latin and the Greek Church, between Islam and Christendom, between Protestantism and Roman Catholicism. These conflicts have ended in what diplomats call a modus vivendi, a recognition of spheres of influence, in mutual toleration but not in a change of the profound doctrine which settled the conflict "fundamentally."

IN MANY ways the most interesting example is the conflict between Islam and Christendom. For at least two centuries after the death of Mohammed (in 632 A. D.) Islam was a religion of forcible conversion by armed conquest. Like Soviet Communism it combined great military power with a doctrine of universal conquest.

Mr. Bohlen in his address quoted Mr. Vishinsky, who is a Soviet lawyer, to the effect that "the foes of socialism" have no rights under Soviet law; under Mohammedan law, according to the eminent Dutch jurist Juynboll, "the testimony of Christians, Jews, and other unbelievers must be regarded as worthless; the judge may attach no credence to the declarations of persons who deny the most important truths in the sphere of Mohammedanism."

THERE IS, moreover, the doctrine of the Jihad, "the duty of believers to take part in the Holy War." The Koran says that "the strife is prescribed for you; you have, it is true, an antipathy to it but it is possible that you have an antipathy to that which is nevertheless good for you." In the ideology of Islam "all lands not belonging to 'the territory of Islam' (dar al-islam) must gradually be conquered by the Muslims, and are therefore called 'territory of the war' (dar al-harb). The imam (a priest and leader) has to settle when the attack shall begin."

Now to this conflict of doctrine between Islam and the rest of the world there has never been, in Mr. Bohlen's sense, a fundamental solution. The Koran has not been revised; the Canon Law has not been repealed. But as a matter of fact practical questions have been progressively settled, and agreements and treaties have been made. Though in theory they can have no validity they have had practical validity in so far as they have reflected the actual balance of power in the place to which the agreement applied. The conquests of Islam ended, though the Koran was not revised at the points where they encountered sufficient force to withstand them.

IF WE study the record of the agreements with the Soviet Union, we shall find, I believe, that many of them have been broken but that some of them have been observed. Thus, for example, the Yalta agreements about political arrangements inside the Soviet zone of military domination have all been broken. But the Yalta agreement fixing the boundaries of the Soviet army has not been broken.

A thorough examination of the difference between agreements that are broken and agreements that are observed would be enormously useful to the State Department and to American public opinion. For it would almost certainly lead Mr. Bohlen and the rest of us to a better understanding of the very practical question which is: what kind of agreement is it useful to negotiate?

ONLY THEN would the contradictions in Mr. Bohlen's address, which are so confusing, disappear. For then he would no longer say that there is no useful purpose in achieving agreements and yet that practical questions may be settled progressively. He would, as one of the responsible makers of policy, be able to say that there are certain types of agreements which are worth trying to make, others which it is not worth trying to make.

And then we should be out of the realm of theory and back in the realm of commonsense.

Tough Job For Stevenson

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—The average citizen who drops his ballot in the box with a virtuous sense that he has done his civic duty until another election rolls around seldom comes up against the harsh reality of who gets what under the American political system of the present day. A window dressing of history and campaign speeches stands between the citizen and the men he elects to public office.

Childs

Illinois' new Governor, Adlai Stevenson, himself a comparative newcomer to the rough-and-tumble of politics, is making some startling discoveries in his first weeks in office. The Governor's salary is $12,000 a year, plus a house, a car and driver and a modest expense allowance.

Yet, by a rough estimate, it costs the Governor $50,000 a year just to maintain himself in the office. For example, he is expected to contribute an amount usually set by precedent to every good and charitable cause in the State, both big and little.

From where does the difference between $12,000 and $50,000 come? Well, the seasoned politician speaks cynically of a category called "honest graft." By this he means the kind of kickback that may cost the taxpayers little or nothing and may not involve any major turpitude.

IT SOMETIMES seems that State governments were deliberately designed to put the highest reward on graft and corruption. The State of Illinois last year had a payroll of $100,000,000 and the budget for the coming years it tentatively set at $1,200,000,000.

Yet, the boss of this huge enterprise is paid a pathetically inadequate salary and hampered at almost every turn. While the equation of who gets what is somewhat more hardboiled in Illinois, the situation here is fairly typical of the other 47 States.

Thanks to his own reputation and to the prestige of his astonishing victory of last fall, Governor Stevenson has succeeded in persuading some able men to take responsibile jobs in his administration at less than adequate salaries. His director of finance is George W. Mitchell, a tax economist with the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago. Mr. Mitchell hopes to put in a sensible purchasing system so that the State will get approximately a dollar of value for each dollar that it spends. One of the greatest sources of graft in recent years has been in the purchase of supplies for State institutions.

Governor Stevenson's director of mines is James W. Starks, a coal company executive with expert knowledge. Mr. Starks will move at once to reform the coal mine inspection system, riddled in the recent past with favoritism and inefficiency, one result of which was the tragic Centralia disaster that took 111 lives.

THE FACT that these changes are being made in Illinois, where from time to time the political level has sunk mighty low, is in itself extraordinary. Col. Jacob M. Arvey has had a lot to do with it.

Serving through some of the fiercest battles of the war in the Pacific, Colonel Arvey did some hard thinking. Returning to become the Democratic boss of Chicago, he first backed Martin Kennelly as a reform mayor. Then a year ago he put his support behind Mr. Stevenson for Governor and Paul Douglas for United States Senator. If anyone had said five years ago that such a political miracle could happen here, he would have been quickly hustled off to one of the State's overcrowded mental institutions.

Seizure by Virginia Averts Bus Strike

Richmond, Va., Feb. 3 (Thursday) (AP).—The State seized Virginia Transit Co. facilities in Richmond, Norfolk, and Portsmouth at 12:01 a. m. today.

The action, taken to prevent a strike by the VTC's 1,600 union operators in the three cities, came by formal proclamation of the State Corporation Commission.

The operators had scheduled a walkout for midnight after a long wage dispute with the transit company. But State seizure of the utility, a foregone conclusion for a week, apparently forestalled a work stoppage.

Union officials indicated previously that operators will work for the State and, therefore, there apparently will be no schedule interruptions. Operators' salaries, which precipitated the dispute, will remain the same, as will transit fares in the three cities.

SCC Commissioner L. McCarthy Downs will supervise State control of the transit facilities, with SCC Commerce Counsel William C. Siebert in charge of operations.

The Governor's seizure preparations were taken under Virginia's Public Utilities Labor Relations Act, which empowers the Governor to take over and operate strike-threatened utilities to prevent disruption of services in the public interest.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he was treated for second- and third-degree burns to his face and hands.

The explosion occurred in the rear of 1338 D st. ne., at 11:01 a. m., police said, when a cigarette that Redwine was smoking ignited the gasoline.

Concerned with a traffic death toll of over 30,000 persons a year, President Truman yesterday invited the Nation's Governors to a highway safety conference in Washington June 1 through 3.

The meeting will be the first full-scale session of the Presidential Highway Safety Conference since 1946.

He invited Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland, and Mayor George W. Welsh of Grand Rapids, Mich., to serve as vice chairmen. The chairman is Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator.

Senate Passes Income Tax Bill

tax yielded unexpectedly high revenue.

The provision for the automatic income tax hike from 2 to 2½ per cent was passed at the same time as the sales tax.

An additional $3,800,000 would have poured into the State treasury if the income tax rate had been left at 2½ per cent, State officials said.

The bil reducing the tax rate was approved on second reading under suspension of Senate rules, and two Republican Senators voted favorably "under protest."

Senator Howard S. O'Neill, of Harford County, labelled the reduction a "pittance" and said he would like to see the State income tax eliminated altogether.

Not "Equitable," Kimble Says

The other unwilling Republican, Senator Robert B. Kimble, of Allegany County, said he did not believe the reduction "an equitable tax adjustment."

One of the proposed amendments, expected to meet with quick concurrence in the House, would permit a short optional return, based on tables of incomes and taxes rather than a detailed report on the regular forms.

Meanwhile, legislative leaders expressed doubt today that a bill introduced in the House by Delegate John R. Reeves (R., Montgomery) exempting from the sales tax food and refreshments sold in public eating places, would get out of committee in the near future.

A similar fate, because final revenue estimates of the State for the next year are not yet available, was predicted for another bill which would exempt clothing and accessories for infants under 3 years of age from the sales tax.

A third measure, one which would exempt heating fuels for the home from the sales tax also is in committee.

Action Due Next Week On Jim Crow Repeal

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 2 (AP).—Committee action on a perennial bill to repeal Maryland's Jim Crow law will come next week, Delegate Melnicove (D., Baltimore, Fourth) said today.

Melnicove is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Montgomery Mail Heavy On Liquor Sales Issue

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 2 (Spl.).—A large volume of mail has been received from Montgomery County citizens dealing with proposed legislation authorizing liquor sales at veterans clubs in the county, it was disclosed here tonight by the county's legislative delegation.

The delegates said they would hold a public hearing on the proposal Friday at 7:30 p. m. in the Intermediate School on Philadelphia ave., in Silver Spring, in an effort to sample public opinion. The date of the proposed hearing was erroneous in an article in The Washington Post of Wednesday.

Not Exempt

Maryland Tax Includes Fuel Oil

Fuel oil is not exempt from the Maryland State sales tax.

In reporting yesterday that a measure had been introduced in the Maryland General Assembly for exemption of coal, wood, kerosene and gas from the sales tax, The Washington Post inadvertently stated that fuel oil was already exempt. Exemption of fuel oil is proposed in the new bill.

The Retail Sales Tax Act and Use Tax Act passed in 1947, provide that natural or artificial gas, electricity, steam, oil and coal are subject to tax except when sold to the State of Maryland, Federal Government or to nonprofit religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational institutions or organizations. The tax does not apply when they are sold for use in manufacturing or processing.

Among items which are not subject to the sales tax are medicines; food and ice for consumption in the home; physician and dentist fees; new or used motor vehicles which are subject to a titling tax; items costing 13 cents or less when sold singly; telephone, telegraph and cable services; dry cleaning and laundry services, and charges for the privilege of bowling, golfing and other sports.

In addition to the household heating fuels named above, items that are subject to the sales tax include: cosmetics and toiletries, clothing, furniture, household supplies, hardware, flowers, livestock when not purchased for agricultural use, newsstand purchase of magazines, and water sold in bottles and other containers.

The sales tax also applies to all food sold in restaurants, but a delegate to the General Assembly has declared he will introduce a bill soon to exempt such food from the tax.

Parking Meter Fight Carried To Annapolis

Annapolis, Feb. 2 (Spl.).—Hyattsville's controversial parking meters were defended and attacked last night by the city's officials and businessmen at a hearing held by the Prince Georges County legislative delegation.

In the end, the delegation took the issue under advisement for further study.

Hervey Machen, an attorney representing the Hyattsville Business and Professional Men's Association, urged passage by the Maryland General Assembly of a bill to submit the meter issue to a city referendum.

The proposal was contested by Nicholas Orem, attorney representing the city's mayor and council. Two councilmen, Fred Coxen and Hiram Lawrence, opposed the referendum, contending a majority of Hyattsville citizens like the meters.

Both Machen and President Daniel J. Burke, of the businessmen's association, asserted that because of the meters their customers are shopping in nine other commercial centers around the community.

"It's not the nickels and pennies they are afraid of," Burke declared, "it's the $1 fine for overtime parking."

Machen claimed the city's option expiration date, by which time the city must decide to abandon or keep the meters, would expire before the scheduled May election of four councilmen. Spokesmen for the city said the option would not expire before June 12.

To a question from Delegation Chairman Perry O. Wilkinson, both sides indicated willingness to let the meters be the main issue in the municipal election. Machen said the businessmen planned to support a slate of four candidates running on an anti-meter platform.

About 25 members of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Firemen's Association also explained to the delegation provisions of a referendum bill to impose a 10-cent fire tax on property owners in the 2d, 9th, and 21st election districts in Prince Georges.

Takoma Park Takes No Action In Alleged Zoning Violation

The mayor and city council of Takoma Park, Md., took no action against Roy C. Potts, of 210 Maple ave., Takoma Park, for an alleged zoning violation following a public hearing last night.

C. L. Risher, of 228 Cedar ave., Takoma Park, had charged that Potts, who owns a 14-room house at 226 Cedar ave., had converted it into a six-unit apartment house in violation of the zoning ordinance. The property is located in a Residential A one-family house zone.

Potts denied he had converted the house and said it was that way when he bought it four years ago. He said he is now operating it as a rooming house.

Mayor John C. Post and the city council, deciding zoning violations in Takoma Park are so widespread it would be unfair to single out Potts, voted to meet with the Maryland National Capital Park & Planning Commission to discuss an overall rezoning program for Takoma Park.

2 Former Army Officers Testify Miss Gillars Approached Them With Microphone

fied that after he was wounded and captured on August 5, 1944, he was taken to "Hospital Pitie" in Paris.

"While a patient there were you visited by a woman?" Kelley inquired.

"I was, sir."

"Do you see her here today?"

"That woman over there," Crosthwaite replied extending his arm toward the counsel's table where the silver-haired, black-frocked defendant sat, chin in hand.

The witness said he did not know Miss Gillars' name when she visited the hospital. This was approximately August 12, 1944, he said.

In the same room with him, he said, were three other officers—an American lieutenant named "McKinney" (Grover Cleveland McKinney, who testified later in the day) another Canadian "Hugh Harrison" and a second American known to Crosthwaite only as "Bob."

"This woman — the defendant — came into the room and struck up a conversation in very friendly fashion. She asked me if I'd like to make a record to notify my next of kin about my condition.

"She offered us cigarettes," Crosthwaite continued, "but did not identify herself.

"After a microphone was handed to her from the doorway, she proceeded to interview me and I spoke about the mike."

At this point Kelley asked the witness if he had heard a playback of the recording as intercepted by Government monitors here.

Another Voice in Playback

"Was there another voice in the playback that you did not recognize?" Kelley asked.

"Yes, there was."

Crosthwaite

McKinney

"Is that voice given the name of Hansford?"

The witness replied that such was the case and testified that he did not know a "Hansford" and that no one by that name was present in his room at the interview.

(The playback of the recording heard via earphones in the courtroom contained in addition to interviews with Crosthwaite and McKinney, a nessage from a Gilbert Hansford of Cincinnati, Ohio.)

In addition the playback contained comments by "Midge"—identified as the name often used by Miss Gillars on broadcasts—that the war was a sort of joint conspiracy between President Roosevelt and Jews.

Referring to these and similar comments in the playback Kelley asked Crosthwaite if he would have consented to the interview had he known that the comments would be part of the broadcast.

"Absolutely not," the witness replied firmly.

The witness then testified that Miss Gillars carried the microphone over to Lieutenant McKinney's bad about a yard and a half away, that he heard the conversation between them and that it paralleled his own interview.

He said Miss Gillars asked McKinney how he was being treated and that the latter replied "Very effectively,' and not according to what she wanted."

"She turned to Lieutenant Harrison," the witness stated, and he shook his head and didn't want to participate in the interview, so she left.

The next witness, Grover Cleveland McKinney, of Denver, who said he was interviewed immediately after Crosthwaite, then took the stand.

McKinney, 30 years old, bespectacled and wearing a bow tie, looked more like a prewar collegian than a combat veteran of the invasion.

He told of being wounded and captured, finding himself on August 8, 1944, in the Hospital Pitie.

After identifying Miss Gillars as the woman who interviewed him, he told of the incident in much the same fashion as had Crosthwaite.

Tells of Interview

McKinney, too, testified he had heard a playback of the original broadcast and declared the defendant spoke "words in the recording she did not utter" in the presence of him and Crosthwaite.

He told how, in the interview, he said he was being treated "fairly decently" and said that Miss Gillars immediately pressed for clarification. He said he then told her he was being treated as well as possible under the circumstances.

At one point Kelley asked Crosthwaite as to "the facts" on the care given him and McKinney by the Germans.

As Laughlin rose to object, Miss Gillars directed vehement remarks to her counsel, her voice rising. Federal Judge Edward M. Curran shut her off with a stern "Just a minute!"

Schnell Gives Views

Admission of Schnell as a witness will be argued further today.

Yesterday he was withdrawn after he stated that although he believed in a "supreme being" he did not have faith in after life with punishments and rewards. He told Judge Curran he did not know whether or not he was an atheist.

Laughlin objected to his admissibility as a sworn witness under the circumstances.

Schnell was slated to be the second Government witness to Miss Gillars' participation in a drama "Vision of Invasion"—held by the Government to constitute overt act No. 10.

However, Kelley said yesterday that Hans Von Richter, former German radio official who testified earlier would be recalled if necessary to testify as to Miss Gillars' part in the drama.

In the meantime, two witnesses subpenaed by Laughlin are enroute from Germany by plane, through Government cooperation.

They were named as Emil Beckmann and Franz Schafer. According to Laughlin both are prepared to testify that Miss Gillars was threatened with death by authoritative German officials if she did not do as she was told.

The trial will be resumed today at 10 a. m. with other soldiers, allegedly interviewed by Miss Gillars, taking the witness stand.

Army Trial

Ex-GI Denies Mistreatment By Wolford

Fort Meade, Md., Feb. 2 (AP).—A former prisoner testified today he was not mistreated while Capt. Samuel H. Wolford was in charge of solitary confinement cells at the Army disciplinary blockade at Wurzburg, Germany.

Testifying on the second day of Captain Wolford's court martial, Freddie Bowles, 20, of Ironton, Ohio, said the officer "never treated me cruel or inhuman."

Captain Wolford of Clear Springs, Md., is the second of four officers to be tried on charges of "cruel or inhuman" treatment of prisoners in January, 1947. One officer was acquitted last week, and two more are to be tried.

While Bowles said Wolford did not mistreat him and that he held "no grudge" against the officer, he said he was cold the entire 6½ days he spent "in the hole." He admitted he never asked for more blankets.

The charges against the four officers were brought by the Army on complaints that at least three prisoners suffered frostbite, one of them testifying the resulting gangrene led to amputation of his feet.

Col. Harold McClure, former commander of the prison and one of those awaiting trial, testified on rules and regulations at the camp.

Princess Aly Asks Divorce

Paris, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Princess Aly Khan unexpectedly appeared in Seine department civil court today to start divorce proceedings which reportedly will not mention her husband's love for Actress Rita Hayworth.

"Miss Hayworth will not be named in the princess' suit," her attorney, Jean Rapoport, said. "The suit will be drawn up in mild and measured terms in order to protect the couple's children from further scandal."

The British-born princess, heiress to part of the Guinness Brewing millions, and her wealthy Moslem husband will charge each other with "grave injury" and "serious insult."

Aly and Rita, who have toured Europe and North America together, should be free to marry before the end of the month.

Silver Spring Board Meets

If Congress adopts a sales tax for the District, the Silver Spring Board of Trade should reverse its stand against the Maryland sales tax, Blair Lee, 3d, outgoing board president, said last night. In his annual report to the board, given at the Indian Spring Country Club, Lee said the alternative to sales tax is higher taxes on individual and corporate incomes.

As retiring president, Lee also recommended that:

Board members be cautious in accepting any "ill-considered" movement to incoroprate the community. If incorporation must come, he said, it should be preceded by a careful survey.

The board should cooperate with county authorities but should resist any efforts to curtail services and facilities.

Locally collected taxes should be spent locally.

The No. 1 objective of the board in 1949 should be the conversion of Georgia ave. to a dual highway from the north end of the Silver Spring business section to Glenmont.

Dances Presented By Martha Graham

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Martha Graham, who gave her first New York recital in April, 1926, appeared once again last night at Lisner Auditorium as the old master of modern dance.

In the role of the sorceress in "Cave of the Heart," she danced with almost fanatic dedication, giving an interpretation of evil love with austere passion.

The old hieratic angularities that long have characterized her work, were there, but they now have achieved a mellow softening that gives a fluidity to her dancing without subtrating from its effectiveness.

Adding to this was a color scheme of browns, reds, blacks and whites, Cretan in feeling—a feeling that together with properties used in this and other dances suggest some of the dark passages in that partial chronicle of man's past, "The Golden Bough."

Ably supporting Miss Graham in "Cave of the Heart," music by Samuel Barber, and distinguishing themselves in other dances, were Miss Graham's husband, Erick Hawkins, and Natanya Neumann and Helen McGehee. The orchestra was led by Eugene Lesler.

Opening number was "Diversion of the Angels," music written by Norman Dello Joio. The dance, a light depiction of a happy state of mind in youthful love, had that depth of feeling usually found in a love lyric of a pastoral Strephon and Phyllis.

"Diversion of the Angels" aroused little enthusiasm. The fact that there were several slips of the foot—the company had not had time to rehearse before the performance—did not help. "Diversion of the Angels" was just pretty.

In "Lear," having its premiere, we are back in the Graham forte: The dark emotions and recesses of the mind. Through the tortured mind of the unhappy father was successfully and at times, excitingly protrayed, and the music, by Vincent Perischetti, satisfied, the dance did not quite measure up to "Cave of the Heart" in feeling.

The final number, "Every Soul Is a Circus," a satire for which Paul Nordoff composed the music, and the second of the two dances in which Miss Graham appeared, was a satisfying conclusion to a worthwhile evening.

Postlude

Concert Led By Mitchell Is Arresting

By Paul Hume

Howard Mitchell gave last night's Constitution Hall audience an exciting foretaste of the kind of music they can expect next year from the National Symphony.

The orchestra's conductor-elect led a quartet of compositions, including two great symphonies, the Washington premiere of an American score and a Mozart overture. Symphonies were Beethoven's Fourth and the Seventh of Sibelius—both important pages in music. The Sibelius had not been performed by the National Symphony, and the Beethoven only once many years ago.

Joseph Wagner, composer and conductor now directing the Duluth Symphony, was the native creative talent of the evening, in his concertino for harp and orchestra. Sylvia Meyer, the orchestra's gifted harpist, was soloist. The work received its world premiere Tuesday evening in Baltimore, and its Washington debut last night.

It is well written in that it gives the harp ample opportunity for varying kinds of display. The beautiful stringed instrument played sustained melodic lines, with interstitial cadenzas of sweeping splendor. A wide variety of touches made Miss Meyer's work constantly arresting, and added to a sense of freshness when the musical content veered toward the monochromatic. Leaning strongly upon the French impressionist school, Wagner's concertino will undoubtedly have numerous hearings. It is well devised to fill a needed spot in the repertoire. Miss Meyer shared the prolonged applause with the composer who was sufficiently delighted to throw kisses to his attractive protagonist.

Dismissing Mozart's Seraglio overture with the witty bite it needs, Mitchell gave a sensitive reading of Beethoven's Fourth Symphony. Voices of romanticism are heard early in this score, only to give way to pure classicism in the final movements. These elements were nicely balanced under the young conductor who allows music to speak for itself. The orchestra sounded well throughout, save for the violins which have a way to go before they achieve the precision needed. It takes time to remedy seasons of unrhythmical playing.

In the towering Seventh Symphony of Finland's great genius, Mitchell welded an unbroken line. The score is a powerful document—often dark in hue but brilliant in the sounds of the higher strings and brass. The violins did much to redeem themselves in the final pages of the symphony, where they soared with amazing polish, leading the way for the final peroration.

This is a contemporary work, one we should hear more often. Mitchell is completely at home in it, and deserves great credit for bringing it to Washington attention. His reading of it entitles him to even greater merit. The entire evening was a fitting prelude to the financial campaign opening tomorrow.

Lee D. Butler, a member of the symphony board, spoke to the audience at intermission time, urging their support during the campaign. He was introduced by Emerson Meyers, campaign chairman.

Bill Offered to Curb Eviction of Tenants

Legislation to postpone the sale of permanent-type public housing projects until the expiration of Federal rent controls was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative King (D., Calif.) King said enactment of the legislation would prevent eviction of tenants who are not members of mutual groups negotiating for the purchase of some of the Federal housing projects throughout the country.

Federal rent controls expire under present law on March 31, but legislation is being considered to extend them for as much as two years.

$12,000 Awarded Girl, 15, Injured By Propeller

A 15-year-old Gaithersburg (Md.) girl and her father have received awards totaling $15,000 for injuries she received when struck by the propellor of an airplane that landed near their farm home.

The award gave $12,000 to Martha Jane Repass and $3000 to her father, Stuart L. Repass, and represented an out-of-court settlement which was ratified by Judge Herman M. Moser of Baltimore, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

Defendants were the Congressional School of Aeronautics on Rockville pike, Robert J. Wolf, 23, student pilot of the plane, and Arthur C. Hyde of Rockville, manager of the Congressional Airport and School. The suit had been transferred from Montgomery County Circuit Circuit Court to Baltimore.

Earl of Bucket Is a Droll Chap

By Richard L. Coe

A DELIGHTFUL COMEDY, whacky and wry, has sneaked into the Playhouse. "Don't Take It to Heart," a British import, is chipped from the same vein of dry wit as "Storm in a Teacup," "I Know Where I'm Going" and "The Ghost Goes West." Admirers of those three need be told no more.

Our setting is a dot on the map called Chaunduyt, pronounced Conduit. The people who live here are almost all named Bucket, of which there are many pronunciations, though there is a family named Pail.

In the storied castle of the Buckets, the present earl poses as a guide, who is far too restrained to accept tips though he is not backward in pointing to a handsome receptacle for such purpose. When the earl's sister arrives for a visit, there's a problem of what room she can use. "It will mean," says the ancient butler, "letting the owls out of the baths." The ringing of the phone startles everyone. It hasn't rung since 1941 and no one's too certain where the instrument's kept: When a telegram comes, the earl puts it in his pocket to "let it mature."

Into these halls tramp three visitors. One, Richard Greene, is a literary man and lawyer, interested in some old papers uncovered after a bomb hit the castle. Another is an offensive man named Pike, who's rented the castle's dower house and insists he wants no poaching on his property, though his landlord, the earl, would rather enjoy doing a bit of poaching himself. The third visitor is an early earl who got walled up by his wife 400 years ago for some delightful reason which I seem to have forgotten.

In a situation entirely too unbelievable to trust to specific words, these people come head on in one of those courtroom scenes so dear to the British camera. Greene is anxious, among other things, to prove to the earl's daughter that she needn't be a lady. Pike is hopeful of avenging himself on the village poacher, a bibulous, apoplectic man who's been plagued by animal visitors in his house. Pike's pique is tremendous. (Sorry, but this picture brings out the pun in me.) The ghost only wants to get on the witness stand to clear his conscience, to do which one word would frighten Hollywood witless.

I wouldn't say that this is all completely unrelieved nonsense, but for the most part the comedy runs along at the neat pace set by its opening. This is a scene of terrified bus passengers in the hands of an unconcerned driver, it's the sort of thing we've all been laughing at since Harold Lloyd used to make his wild dashes through traffic. But somehow, it's as funny as ever.

The musical background, too, is inspired nonsense. The brash tempo of the jukebox has rolled over the quiet countryside and the old butler prances about with ziggety fanfares. When "Old Lang Syne" is struck to end the feeble castle ball, you'll find the tone deaf standing at attention for the National Anthem. You'll like, too, the band's version of "If You Were the Only Girl in the World."

"Don't Take It to Heart," which proved the surprise hit of the Christmas season in Gotham, evidently was made several years ago and we can all rejoice it's at last making the rounds. One reel of the Playhouse print is in very poor shape and I trust it will be replaced by the time you see it.

Greene is surprisingly amusing as the hero, fitting in a neat cider-drinking scene in which he thinks he's W. Churchill. Patricia Medina could give Lana T. a run as a champion sweater girl, and all the many roles are neatly handled.

You'll chuckle happily all through this one.

A Shade Keeps Stray Light From Striking Camera Lens

By Ollie Atkins

IF YOUR camera is anything better than a box outfit you will have need of a lens shade.

The purpose of the lens shade is to prevent stray light from striking the lens and causing flare in your negative. Stray light is usually from direct sunlight, but may also be from strong reflections of light objects within the view of your lens, regardless of its focal length.

The longer the focal length of your lens the greater the chance for extraneous light to strike it and reflect within the various components of the lens. Nearly all telephoto lenses have built-on lens shades. Telephoto images tend to dim out, and unless a good lens shade shields the glass from incidental light the telephoto image will be very much flattened.

The ordinary camera lens can make a pretty fair picture without a lens shade if it is not used on a sandy beach or over a light-reflecting concrete sidewalk and if it is not pointed at an angle into the sunlight. Any lens will "flare" if pointed directly into a brilliant source of light. With a good lens shade you can turn your camera well into the direct light of the sun without flare, for the shade protects the lens from the direct light rays.

It is very simple to tell if your camera is picking up "flare." Just look in the ground glass and the brilliant and multi-sized circles you see on the glass will indicate flare. A simpler method than this is to observe the lens and if it is shaded from the light (and by shaded we mean in shadow) it is okay.

I have made many pictures directly into the sunlight by having an onlooker hold his hat some 3 feet above and slightly forward of the lens. The hat is out of the lens view but that shadow protects my lens from the direct light.

Lens shades can be too long. If you notice the corners of your negatives are underexposed (this is especially noticeable in color), it means the shade is extending too far beyond the lens and trimming its field of view.

Most lens shades these days are combination filter holders. I personally use the Cooper combination lens shade and filter holder for the great ease it affords in switching filters without unscrewing a lot of parts. However, my Cooper shade was too long and I had to have a machine shop saw off half an inch. With plenty of respect for the Kodak experts, who make excellent equipment, I feel that their weakest point is with their lens shades. Too many things to do to use them and no shade about your filter are my chief complaints.

Arbitrator Denies Textile Workers 10-Cent Pay Boost

Boston, Feb. 2 (AP).—An arbitrator today denied a 10-cents-an-hour wage increase sought by 23,000 CIO textile workers union members in 24 American Woolen Co. plants.

Raymond F. O'Connell, the impartial arbitrator selected by the company and the union to settle the wage dispute, said: "It is very apparent that the sellers' market has ended."

Emil Rieve, president of the union, said in a statement: "Apparently arbitration is becoming a matter of prophecy rather than fact. It is now the fashion to rule out past profits as a basis for higher wages. The arbitrator, therefore, becomes a fortune teller; and he sees in the future, it seems, only what the employer wants him to see."

The Weather Angle

Use your lens shade and a K-2 filter to make a picture like this of the kids and their sled against a darkened sky and the fleecy snow. On this posed picture, notice the low angle any camera can make at 6 to 8 feet distance

Veteran Group Tax Exemption Asked in Bill

Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) chairman of the House District Committee yesterday introduced a House bill to exempt veteran organizations which are chartered by act of Congress from paying the District personal property tax.

McMillan introduced two other bills. One would boost from 10 to 13 the number of Washington Municipal Court judges. The other would require persons who want to stop payment of checks to do so in writing to the bank on which the check is drawn. Committee aides said the proposed bill is similar to laws adopted in 32 States upon recommendations of bankers' associations. The bills were referred to the District Committee.

650 Go to Hearing On Bedford School Superintendent

Bedford, Va., Feb. 2 (AP).—More than 650 persons crowded the halls and court room of Bedford Court House today at a public hearing of charges against A. G. Cummings, for 17 years division superintendent of Bedford County schools.

Cummings is accused of showing "flagrant disregard for the best interest of Bedford County school children," of favoritism in the awarding of school contracts and appointment of teachers, and of general "inefficient" management of school funds.

The charges were brought by the recently organized Public School Association and the hearing was called by the county school board.

The opposition to Cummings during the morning was led by Mrs. D. H. Oglesby of Boonsboro, chairman, and Bolling Lambeth, Bedford Commonwealth attorney and secretary of the Public School Association.

Backward Area Plan Approved by France

Paris, Feb. 2.—(AP)—The French cabinet today approved President Truman's proposal for the development of the world's economically backward areas.

Premier Henri Queuille presided at the meeting. The cabinet ordered the French ambassador to get details from the State Department on how the President's ideas are to be put into effect.

Miller Offers School Plan For Virginia

Sedley, Va., Feb. 2 (AP).—A schools platform emphasizing State responsibility for teacher pay schedules and State aid for school construction was announced here tonight by Francis Pickens Miller of Albemarle, candidate for Governor in the August Democratic primary.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the Ruritan Club of this Southampton County community, Miller nailed together these planks on public education.

1. The State should pay for a salary schedule geared to a minimum of $2000 yearly for holders of collegiate professional teachers' certificates.

Fund for Worthy Towns

2. The State should help equalize school facilities by establishing a fund for worthy localities which, having done their part, are yet unable to meet their building needs.

3. These things can be done without requiring any new State taxes in the next four years if current prosperity continues and if existing tax laws are enforced strictly.

4. No sales tax should be enacted without submitting it to vote of the people, and none should be considered except as a "last resort"—which Miller doesn't think is near.

It was the first detailed outline of candidate Miller's views on what is currently Virginia's main problem: What to do about the school system.

Of the recent discussion of the school construction needs, put by school authorities' estimates at some 396 million dollars for the next 10 years, Miller said: "Admittedly, millions of dollars worth of new buildings are required, but decisions regarding a building program and the source of funds to pay for it can only be made wisely in the light of an over-all policy decision on the State level regarding the future of our entire public school system."

Rep. Hays Offers Compromise Plan On Civil Rights

A compromise civil rights program yesterday was outlined to the House by Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.), who said his proposals were designed to end divisive controversy.

Hays suggested a four-point program:

1. The limiting of Federal nonsegregation policies to interstate movements.

2. Repeal by constitutional amendment of poll tax requirements for voting.

3. A modified anti-lynching bill leaving primary responsibility with the States.

4. Abandonment of all proposals for coercion in employment (an FEPC with compulsory powers) but establishment of a counseling service to work for non-discrimination in industry.

Tour of Virginia By Former Red Fliers Delayed

By The Associated Press

A Virginia tour originally set for yesterday for two Russian fliers who escaped their native land will start Friday.

The two-day delay was caused by unfavorable weather conditions for the overseas flight of Lieut. Peter Afanasevich Porogov, 27, and Anatol Porferevich Barsov, 31.

Instead of landing yesterday morning at the National Airport across the Potomac from Washington, they are due to arrive at Westover Field, Mass., tonight and go to Virginia Friday morning.

Officials of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce said the itinerary of the seven-day tour will have to be changed in some details.

The Russians, who said they would like to visit Virginia after hearing a Voice of America broadcast about the State, landed in the American zone of Austria last October.

They escaped in what they described as a "borrowed" plane. Since then they have been living in Germany.

Tour officials said plans still include a visit to Alexandria and Mount Vernon before going to Richmond.

Dudley May Be First Negro U. S. Diplomat

By the United Press

The State Department announced yesterday that the United States Legation in Monrovia, Liberia, and the Liberian legation in Washington will be raised to embassy status.

That caused speculation that the United States Minister to Liberia, Edward R. Dudley, might become the first American Negro Ambassador. He is now the Nation's only Negro diplomatic agent.

Security Bank Net Climbs to $21.92 a Share

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net operating income of Security Savings & Commercial Bank rose to $295,237 last year, President Francis G. Addison noted in his annual report to stockholders. This compared with $263,952 in the previous year.

Addison

Including non-operating earnings, net profits for 1948 totaled $305,228 before income taxes as contrasted with $298,147 in 1947. Net after income taxes was equal to $21.92 a share on capital stock, against $20.55 a share in the previous year.

The 9th and G sts. institution reported loans totaled $11,699,739 at yearend, slightly less than the $11,725,000 at the end of 1947. Investment in Government securities totaled $8,554,000, against $8,803,942 on December 31, 1947.

After payment of dividends, charge-offs and provision of $44,388 for bad debts reserve, the bank added $89,368 to undivided profits.

Addison commented that deposits held about level during the year. He added that operating costs probably will continue higher this year, but volume of loans should be sufficient to assure "another satisfactory year" in 1949.

PENNSY'S NET: The Pennsylvania Railroad reported 1948 net income of $34,429,934, nearly five times greater than the $7,285,125 of the previous year. December net totaled $4,990,424, against $10,946,400 in same 1947 month. The figures show that earnings in December, 1947, wiped out a deficit that year and provided $7,285,125 net for 1947. The net income for 1948 is equal to $2.61 a common share, compared with 55 cents in 1947.

MARGIN CUT SEEN: A slash in the amount of cash needed to buy stock on margin may be made about March 31. A Federal Reserve Board spokesman said yesterday conferences on lowering the 75 per cent cash figure have been under way for some time. He added that he could see no danger in making a cut now and that one may be announced near the end of the first quarter.

Maryland Roads Aide Kills Himself

An assistant engineer for the Maryland State Roads Commission shot himself in the chest early yesterday morning and died an hour later in Prince George County Hospital.

Thom W. Hall, 45, of 6310 Inwood st., Cheverly, was called a suicide by Dr. John T. Maloney, county medical examiner, who said he was shot through the heart with a .32-20 caliber revolver.

Hall was found in bed in his second-floor room about 8.30 a. m. by his wife, Mrs. Margaret W. Hall, and son, William C., 16, according to Detective Richard A. Pearson.

Pearson said Mrs. Hall and the son were downstairs at the time the shot was fired. They did not hear the gun go off, he said, but were attracted by the sound made when the weapon hit the floor.

The engineer left a note, Pearson reported, which "indicated he had been despondent." The detective added that the note said financial worries were the reason for the despondency.

Hall was an assistant engineer assigned to the State Roads Commission's Upper Marlboro office.

Besides his wife and son, Hall is survived by another son, Thom W. jr., 21, who was asleep at the time his father was found, and a daughter, Margaret A. Hall, 15, who had left for school.

The body was removed to Gasch's funeral home, Hyattsville.

Fairfax Backs Drainage Suit Of Tyler Park

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday agreed to join Tyler Park homeowners in a court suit to force the Tyler Corp. to provide adequate storm drains and repair streets in the subdivision.

R. E. Hill, roads committee chairman of the Tyler Park Citizens Association, told the supervisors the Tyler Corp., which promoted the subdivision, had failed thus far to provide the drains as it had promised in a contract with the county.

Attorney Andrew W. Clarke, representing the citizens group, called present drainage conditions "deplorable," and showed the board pictures of flooded roads and cracked and pitted paving.

Fairfax Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh Marsh expressed belief the contract with the county might be unenforceable, but Clarke said he believed it was when taken with verbal agreements which he said the corporation had made with home buyers.

The board indorsed Tuesday's demand by the Fairfax School Board for a special Virginia General Assembly session to provide funds for school construction.

The board also tentatively adopted a $160,640 Welfare Board budget for 1949-50. The budget compares with $140,998 for 1948-49.

Post Is Honored For Reporting on The Handicapped

National officers of the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped yesterday presented a "Certificate of Appreciation" to The Washington Post and its publisher, Philip L. Graham.

Paul Strachan, national president of the federation, told Graham the award was made because of the "objective reporting" in matters dealing with the physically handicapped in The Washington Post.

Others who attended the presentation in Graham's office were Miss Mildred Scott, secretary of AFPH; William P. McCahill, a vice president of AFPH and assistant to the chairman of the President's Committee on National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, and Richard McCamant, also an AFPH vice president and rehabilitation officer of the Civil Service Commission.

1930 Evidence Used Against Transamerica

By The Associated Press

Counsel for the Federal Reserve Board dug out some 19-year-old evidence yesterday to back up its anti-trust charges against the Transamerica Corp., the Nation's biggest bank holding company.

The evidence was testimony taken during a congressional banking investigation in 1930.

Solicitor Leonard Townsend said, at the opening of board hearings, a "pattern of activity" tending toward creation of a credit monopoly would be traced back to 1904.

Transamerica's chief attorney, Samuel B. Stewart, objected but was overruled by R. M. Evans, presiding officer for the hearings.

Stewart said the only way the board can support its charges that Transamerica holds a monopoly on bank credit in five Western States is to show that such a situation exists now. He denied that it does.

Wright Patman Heads Small Business Group

Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) yesterday was named chairman of the special House committee studying the problems of small business.

Others selected as members by Speaker Rayburn were Representatives Keough, New York; Hardy, Virginia; Mansfield, Montana; and Evins, Tennessee; Democrats; Halleck, Indiana; Hill, Colorado; Reihlman, New York, and Lichtenwalter, Pennsylvania; Republicans.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

FOR HIS SERVICES with the Yankees this up-coming season, Joe DiMaggio is asking in the neighborhood of $100,000, which is a nice neighborhood though a bit more stylish than that to which he has been accustomed.

If DiMaggio is setting his sights somewhat higher in the payroll department this year, that is quite understandable. He has been reading the papers and noting that Bob Feller rejected a paltry $70,000 offer from the Cleveland Indians; that Ted Williams grossed $80,000 last year, and that Hal Newhouser's pay raise lifted him into the $65,000 class.

POVICH

Thus surveying the comparative talents of those guys, DiMaggio is moved to top their demands. An interesting commentary is that the Yankee owners expected it. They were not at all flabbergasted by DiMaggio's request for a lot more money, nd had already braced themselves.

DiMaggio is in the best bargaining position of any ballplayer in the league. He's the most indispensable man in the Yankee organization, a fact of which the club's owners are aware.

WITHOUT DiMAGGIO, the Yankees are no pennant threat at all; perhaps would not even be a first-division team. He held the Yanks together all last season, and kept them in the close race that fetched the club treasury a profit of $2,600,000 before corporate taxes of 35 per cent.

Ted Williams outhit DiMaggio by 40 points, but there never was much debate over Williams' comparative value to the Red Sox and DiMaggio's importance to the Yankees. Without DiMaggio, the Yankees were push-overs. Without Williams, the Red Sox took off on their longest winning streak of the season, 13 games.

DiMaggio wasn't even healthy last season. With bruised heels, a troublesome knee and thigh injuries, verily a baling-wire case, he still led the Yanks in hitting, drove in their important runs and enabled the club to stay with the leaders to the last two days of the season.

DiMAGGIO IS BOX-OFFICE, no less than Feller, with the added asset of being in the ball game every day in contrast to Feller's twice-a-week appearances. And the Yankees, who can make more money than any club in the majors, are also in a position to lose more in a single season. Their immense overhead includes no fewer than 50 full-time and part-time scouts.

Big salaries for the stars never did engender any resentment among their playing colleagues. The ballplayers of the previous generation were happy to see Babe Ruth rocket into the $50,000, $60,000 and later the $80,000 class. The Babe dragged the journeyman's salary up, too. He conditioned the club owners to the payment of higher wages.

His sense of values isn't peculiar to DiMaggio, as I was saying. His superior skill is generally recognized. He is making his demands of the richest club in baseball, the club most able to afford the game's biggest salary. The Yankees can't blast about a depleted treasury, like the Browns, for example.

DiMAGGIO'S BARGAINING position this year is a particularly good one. The Yankees are beset by multiple problems. Their infield can't hit, their pitchers are suspect, and DiMaggio is their outfielder who stands above the common herd. With him, the Yankees might manage to stay in the race; without him they are kaput.

Thus far, DiMaggio has displayed no interest in a bonus arrangement that might net him the $100,000 he asks. He has made it clear that he wants his salary on the line; unlike Feller, who has accepted $40,000 in base pay and is quarreling on the sliding scale of bonuses based on home attendance.

DiMaggio recognizes what other well-wishers of the Yankees fear—that this could be a lean year for the Yanks at the gate, despite his own heroics. He can carry a club a long way, but there are limits. He never was the one to count the house before he went to bat. Apparently he doesn't want to be bothered with that chore, and wants to go along as usual, just fixing a wonderful pair of eyes on that guy in the pitcher's box, and what the galoot is serving up.

Ex-Peanut Vendors

DeWitts Purchase Control Of Browns From Muckerman

St. Louis, Feb. 2 (AP).—A pair of brothers who once sold peanuts at Sportsman's Park—Bill and Charlie DeWitt—purchased controlling interest i nthe St. Louis Browns today.

The DeWitts announced at a press conference tonight that they bought the 56 per cent of the Brownie stock which President Richard C. Muckerman owned. The DeWitts held 2 per cent themselves.

No official sale price was announced, but it is believed that they paid close to one million dollars for the stock.

The DeWitts were born in North St. Louis, not too far from Sportsman's Park, which they acquired with the Browns. Their first job in baseball was selling peanuts at the park 35 years ago.

When they announced the purchase the DeWitts declared:

"As long as we have anything to say about them the Browns will stay in St. Louis."

No Change in Personnel

He stated that they plan no change in personnel.

In their statement the DeWitts added:

"We are in this by ourselves. We have no backers."

The deal was completed in Kansas City this afternoon where Muckerman and Bill DeWitt met. Charlie explained the Kansas City location was necessary because Muckerman is out of town on ice company business and would not be back before February 15.

In a written statement Muckerman said he sold his interest in the American League club because he wanted to devote "all of my time and attention to the city ice and fuel company, of which I am executive vice president."

Under the new setup, Bill, who is 46, will b epresident. Charlie, 48, will be vice president. Bill has been general manager and Charlie traveling secretary. Charlie said he will continue as traveling secretary for the time being.

Second St. Louis Shift in Week

The changes will have to be voted by the board of directors, but this is considered a formality since the DeWitts hold a majority of the stock.

This is the second change in ownership of a St. Louis major league club in six days. Last Thursday Fred M. Saigh, jr., bought out Robert C. Hannegan's interest in the St. Louis Cardinals. Saigh is now president with 90 per cent of the Redbird stock.

Terps, Hoyas Box Tonight

Maryland and Georgetown boxers meet for the first time at College Park tonight.

Ten bouts have been carded instead of the usual eight. There will be doubleheaders in the 145 and 155-pound divisions.

Maryland dropped its first match of the season to the Citadel. Georgetown opened with a win over CCNY.

Standout among the Terp ringmen is Eddie Reider, Southern Conference's 155-pound titleholder for two years, and 1948 winner in the Sugar Bowl Tournament. His foe will be Jim Tully.

The Hilltoppers confidently are counting on light heavyweight Billy Rose, member of the football squad, and Heavyweight Ray Larrow, boxing as well as golf captain, to bring them victory.

Hermsen Gets 33 as Caps Rout Jets 83-57

Chicago, Feb. 2—The Washington Capitols, Eastern Division leaders, ended a four game losing streak tonight, defeating the Indianapolis Jets before 3000 witnesses at the Chicago Stadium, 83 to 57.

Ahead by 15 points beginning the final quarter the Capitols built this to 64-47 on Fred Scolari's field goal. Tommy Byrnes retaliated and these were the last points made by the Jets until only three minutes remained.

With Washington leading, 74-49, John Mandic finally looped in a long toss for Indianapolis. By this time, of course, there was no doubt about the outcome.

Kleggie Hermsen featured the Capitols' revival netting 33 points on 12 baskets and 9 free throws.

Cincy Whacks Terps, 70-33

Cincinnati, Feb. 2.—Cincinnati U. scored 43 points while holding Maryland to 13 in the second half and racked up a whopping 70-33 victory over the hapless Terps here tonight.

It was Cincinnati's 12th triumph in 14 starts and left Maryland with practically the same record—but in reverse. The Terps have won only 3 and lost 12.

Forward Dick Richter was the lad who poured it on Maryland, bucketing nine baskets and five free throws for 23 points, almost as many as the whole Terp team scored.

Yankees Sign First Negro, Baltimore Giants' Marquez

By Jack Hand

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—The New York Yankees today signed their first Negro baseball player—Outfielder Luis Marquez of the Baltimore Elite Giants—and became the sixth major league club to hire a Negro athlete.

Marquez, 23-year-old centerfielder, is hitting "about .330" with the Aquadilla club of the Puerto Rican winter league. He will report to the Newark Bears, a Yankee farm, next month at their Haines City, Fla., spring training base.

Negotiations are almost completed for another Negro star, Artie Wilson, 28-year-old shortstop-manager of the leading Mayaguez team of the Puerto Rican League. The Birmingham Black Barons own his contract.

When signed, Wilson also will join Newark. He is hitting .372 in Puerto Rico and led the Negro American League in 1947 and 1948 with .377 and .404.

Since Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers broke baseball's unwritten law by signing Jackie Robinson for Montreal in 1946, the other club owners have followed his lead.

The New York Giants, Boston Braves, Cleveland, Brooklyn and Yankees now employ colored players either in the majors or their farm systems. The St. Louis Browns tried out two in 1947 but released both.

Scouting of the Negro leagues was intensive last summer. The talent hunters have been busy looking over the crop in the winter leagues at Cuba, Panama Canal Zone, Puerto Rico and Venezuela. It is likely that many more Negro players may be signed during the Caribbean world series at Havana, February 20-27.

Tom Greenwade was the Yankee scout who signed Marquez and recommended Wilson. No action has been taken on the reports of Johnny Neun who scouted the Cuban League.

Generals to Choose Between Him and N. C. Coach Tonight

George Barclay, assistant football coach at Maryland, and Crowell Little, North Carolina freshman coach, are running a neck-and-neck race for the head coaching job at Washington and Lee with Barclay believed to have the inside track.

The Generals, who have been without a coach since Art Lewis resigned to become an assistant at Mississippi State three weeks ago, will make known their choice tonight.

In addition to Barclay and Little, the name of Ensign Ben Martin, the Navy's plebe coach, will also be presented to the 10-man athletic committee this evening. Martin, however, is believed to have only an outside chance at best.

Barclay conferred with Capt. Dick Smith, W. and L., athletic director, Sunday and Monday and is believed to be the personal choice of Smith. The latter, however, said last night the athletic committee was "about evenly divided" between Barclay and Little.

Strengthening the belief that Barclay was to be tapped for his first head coaching position was the fact that W. and L. officials conferred with him by phone yesterday, but did not talk to Little.

Barclay was asked, among other things, when he could report for duty if he were chosen and if he would accept a three-year contract instead of a one-year pact as discussed in his weekend meeting at W. and L.

The new coach will be awarded a three-year contract at a salary believed to be about $8000 per year.

Both Barclay and Little played football for North Carolina. Barclay, a guard, was Carolina's first All-America player. He was selected in 1935. Little was a quarterback who graduated two years after Barclay.

If Barclay is appointed, it will mark a return to Lexington for him. It was there, in 1936, that he obtained his coaching start, serving as an assistant to Bill Raftery at VMI. He also coached at Oberlin College and Dartmouth before coming to Maryland in 1947.—MORRIS SIEGEL

Maryland May Play Miami Instead on Dec. 2 in Orange Bowl

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

North Carolina wants to drop Maryland from its 1949 football schedule and the Terrapins have launched negotiations with Miami (Fla.) University to replace the Tar Heels, it was learned last night.

The Maryland-NC game was originally carded for November 12, but was switched to December 3 to permit the Tar Heels to play Notre Dame in Yankee Stadium on the former date.

Carolina's reason for asking to withdraw from the December game is that it now faces an 11-game schedule, and that's one too many.

Maryland, it was learned further, will accede to the request under two conditions:

1. That Carolina and Maryland fix dates immediately for a three-game series which would start in 1950.

2. That it is able to complete its negotiations for a December 2 game with Miami in the Orange Bowl Stadium.

North Carolina and Maryland whose 1948 Griffith Stadium clash attracted 34,588 fans, have agreed to a four-game series, but no specific dates have been fixed for the meetings.

Maryland wants to settle the dates and sites as soon as possible in order to facilitate completion of a long-range schedule

"We are not trying to run out on our obligations to Maryland," Bob Fetzer, N. C. athletic director, told The Washington Post. "We are deeply indebted to Maryland for switching dates to enable us to play Notre Dame and are determined to continue the Maryland-North Carolina series. If Maryland cannot schedule another game for December 3, Carolina will play the game."

Jack Harding, Miami U. athletic director, admitted that a Maryland-Miami game is in the works "and I wouldn't be surprised if we played again this year. Maryland made a big hit in Miami last season and we are anxious to have them back if arrangements can be worked out."

N. Y. Bulldogs Pick Ewart of Eagles Coach

Philadelphia, Feb. 2 (AP).—Charley Ewart, who doubled as backfield coach and general manager of the champion Philadelphia Eagles last season, today became head coach of the New York Bulldogs.

Ewart said he accepted the job with the Bulldogs—new name for the shifted Boston Yanks—because "it gives me an opportunity to do what I've always wanted—coach."

The move came as a distinct surprise here, where Ewart was highly respected for his handling of front-office chores as well as for his work with such backfield stars as Steve Van Buren and Tommy Thompson.

Ewart obtained his release from Eagles President James P. Clark who said he had no idea who would succeed Charley in either capacity.

The new Bulldog coach said he signed a three-year contract but would not disclose the salary terms.

"I never talk about the filthy stuff," said the former star quarterback at Yale.

Ewart replaced Maurice (Clipper) Smith as coach of the Bulldogs. Smith's contract expired at the end of the 1948 season and only last week he signed as coach of the Lafayette College team.

The 33-year-old Ewart was backfield coach at Wesleyan and Brown before entering the Federal Bureau of Investigation during the war. He came with the Eagles for the 1946 season as assistant coach and the job of general manager last year.

Jets Sell Black, Team May Be Next

Indianapolis, Feb. 2 (AP).—Indianapolis Jets of the Basketball Association of America, in last place in the league's Western Division and faced with serious financial difficulty, sold center Charlie Black to Fort Wayne for cash and another player today.

General Manager Paul A. Walk, said the Indianapolis club had only two choices after only 2771 fans turned out for the game with Washington here Tuesday night.

1. Sell the highest salaried men and rely on Coach Burl Friddle's ability to keep the Jets in the running for a playoff spot in post-league play, or

2. Sell the club, lock-stock and-barrel, to an interested National League franchise owner.

N. C. State Upset By Wake Forest

Wake Forest, N. C., Feb. 2 (AP).—Wake Forest's Deacons, who two years ago handed North Carolina State its last Southern Conference basketball defeat, tonight upset the Wolfpack, 52 to 49.

GW Romps, 62-50; Hilltoppers Win, 68-60

All the success they could ask was enjoyed by George Washington and Georgetown last night as they staged their second "big name" basketball double-header at the Armory.

Before a crowd of 3881 paying customers, the Colonials of GWU started it off with a 62-50 triumph over Virginia in the closing minutes.

Georgetown coasted to a 68-60 margin over Princeton in the finale.

Witkin Sparks Colonial Victory

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Instead of folding when one of its prize ball-hawks fouled out of action, George Washington University quintet settled down to some serious basketball and walked over the University of Virginia, 62-50.

GW, trailing most of the way, avenged an earlier 67-53 loss to Virginia by outscoring the rough Cavaliers in the last 4½ minutes of play, 13 points to 2. Its best performance was hung up after Johnny Moffatt, who had controlled the ball off both backboards for the Colonials, was waved out with the hosts leading by a scant 49-48 count.

Witkin Gets Going

Then Gene Witkin, smallest man on the Colonial squad, started a bit of excellent ball-handling that kept GW in possession and allowed Bill Cantwell, Maynard Haithcock and Ace Adler to register the winning points. Witkin himself outscored the Cavaliers in the final minutes with 4 points.

The Colonials had a 7-point deficit 10 minutes before getting credit for their eighth triumph in 14 games. Virginia quickly improved a halftime tie for a 38-31 margin but then Moffatt and Haithcock pushed home points that left GW behind only 42-41. Lenny Small's circus shot finally tied it at 45-all shortly before Moffatt went out and the Colonials put on the big drive.

Five players shared Colonial scoring fairly evenly while Virginia, supposed to have an All-America candidate in Joe Noertker depended for 22 of its points on smooth Ronnie Richard, an expert under the basket. Noertker finished with a mere 9 points, two behind Bill Pandak.

Tops for the G-Streeters was Co-Captain Haithcock, who accounted 12 points. Right behind, however, were Cantwell (11), Moffatt (11), Adler (10) and Witkin (9).

Tied at Half 27-27

There wasn't much to choose between the teams in the first half. For the first seven minutes Richard handled all of Virginia's scoring, his efforts being matched by Moffatt, Cantwell, Adler and McNiff as the Colonials kept pace at 9-9.

Noertker finally found the range and combined with Richard for a 19-14 Cavalier lead but the half ended at 27-all on the strength of Cantwell's late pivot shot and Witkin's rolling snowbird from the right side.

Duke Whips Navy, 55 to 42

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Carl Sapp got hot in the second half today to pace his Duke University basketball mates to a 55-42 victory and hand Navy its worst defeat on the home court this season.

The 6-foot-3-inch reserve center from Raleigh, N. C., hit with either hand at close range and from far out to pile up 15 points in the final session and give him top scoring honors with 19.

The victory was Duke's seventh in 10 games. Navy's loss was its fifth in 13 starts.

Brown Gets 24 In Hoya Win

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Quiet, capable Johnny Brown, who's been threatening to break loose in the last few games, erupted for 24 points last night to help carry Georgetown to its triumph over Princeton that was more convincing than the 68-60 score.

Brown, hard-driving 6-foot-2 forward, was superb with his tap-ins and wound up with eight baskets. In its desperate effort to throttle Princeton sent him to the foul line for 11 tries and he cooly converted eight.

Eagled-eyed Tommy O'Keefe played a strong supporting role, matching Brown's eight field goals and adding three fouls.

Tigers Threaten

Combined scoring of the two offset the determined second-half drive of the Tigers who doggedly stayed on the Hoyas' heels until the last eight minutes when they put together their winning spurt.

Princeton, unbeaton in three Ivy League starts, got off to a slow start with six minutes elapsing before Mike Kearns scored its first field goal.

The visitors kept plugging away and were behind by only 30-28 at halftime.

In a furious, well-played second half both clubs exchanged goals rapidly with Princeton even taking the lead briefly at 37-35.

Going into the final 10 minutes, Georgetown held a 55-50 advantage. O'Keefe dropped a set shot; Leddy made a foul and then Leddy passed nicely to O'Keefe for another basket that ran the Hoya lead to 10 points.

It's All Over

Brown tapped in a clincher and Culhane offset a goal by lanky Cliff Kurrus to make Georgetown's advantage 64-52. It was all over then for Princeton.

Center Bernie Adams paced the Tiger offense with 14 points; Mike Kearns, handicapped by four personals early, tallied 10 and Kurrus nine.

Captain Ray Corley added 13 points to the Georgetown total that enabled it to post a 7-6 mark for the season and snap a three-game losing streak.

Champ Met Him

Brooks Gets Kayoed Just Telling Story

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

DID YOU EVER HEAR of a fighter knocking himself out?

News from Florida about the flattening of Dixie Oliver by Joe Louis brings to mind the story of Mickey Brooks, one-time feather-weight out of Baltimore.

Haight

Mickey is now pressbox handyman at nearby race tracks, and he earned something of a Middle Atlantic fistic reputation before he enlisted in the Navy during World War I.

At Norfolk one night Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams, both claimants for the world title, were scheduled for a four-round exhibition. Williams became ill and Brooks pushed his way to the front of volunteers for the assignment.

While the referee was giving instructions Brooks whispered, "Give me a chance Champ" and Coulon replied, "We won't try to bruise each other, but we've got to give the boys a show."

IN THE SECOND ROUND, Mickey saw an opening and let go with all he had. Coulon tried to duck but caught the full force of the blow on his ear. In the resultant clinch, Coulon muttered, "So you're a wise guy, eh?"

"You got me wrong, Champ," Mickey came back. "That one slipped. Please don't get sore."

Coulon was cautious for the remainder of the round, but in the next he began stinging Brooks.

Finally Mickey decided to use his Sunday punch again. Johnny slipped a little and Brooks slammed in with a haymaker right on the button. Coulon staggered and went into a clinch.

"That's all for you," grunted Coulon.

A moment later it came—a smasher—and Brooks awoke in sick bay the next afternoon.

Years later, the late Col. E. R. Bradley gave a party for the Hialeah pressbox boys at his Palm Beach mansion and Brooks was called on for his "I Fought the Champ" story.

When he got to the point of Coulon's knockout punch, Brooks raised his fist, cracked himself in the jaw, fell over backwards, hit his head on Bradley's marble floor and it took three buckets of ice water and a doctor to bring him to.

Coolidge Stops Eastern, 30-25, Takes 2d

Armory Asks Congress for 10,000 Seats

As many as 10,000 fans may be able to watch sports events at the National Guard Armory if Congress approves a recommendation made by the Armory Board yesterday.

Under this plan armory seating facilities could be raised from the present 5300 to 7100 for $65,000, 8450 for $75,000, and 10,250 for $125,000. The board also recommended the purchase of 5000 portable seats, a folding platform type costing about $25 a seat.

(Last Saturday, a capacity crowd of 6,000 saw the Georgetown-Villanova and George Washington-N. C. State basketball doubleheader at the Armory, and hundreds more were turned away.)

Anacostia Bows, 53-45, To Roosevelt

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Coolidge took over second place with a 30-25 victory over Eastern, and Roosevelt romped over Anacostia, 53-45, yesterday in an Interhigh Basketball League double-header before 1430 at the Armory.

Sparkplug of the Coolidge team was Kenny Luxenberg, a game 5-foot 6-inch guard, who has a glass left eye. He played a grand floor game, and tossed in 15 points as his team notched its fourth win in five games.

Eastern played on even terms with the Colts in all but the third period, when Coolidge outscored the Ramblers, 12-6. The quarter scores were, 3-3, 14-14, and 26-20, with Coolidge ahead going into the last period. Don Eslin also played a stellar game for Coolidge, scoring 10 points. High scorer for Eastern, which lost its first game in four starts, was Bob Selby with eight points.

Dunbar Wins, Phelps Loses

Dunbar won a 52-49 overtime game over Carver of Baltimore last night, and the loss, Carver's second in nine starts, dropped the visitors into second place in the South Atlantic High School Basketball League behind idle Armstrong.

In the second game, Parker-Gray of Alexandria defeated Phelps, 37-29. It was the fifth league win in seven starts for P-G. Phelps' loss was its sixth in seven games.

Skins Play Bears Here This Year

The Washington Redskins' home schedule for 1949 was all but completed yesterday when Commissioner Bert Bell, of the National Football League, informed the local pros that the Chicago Bears would invade Griffith Stadium.

Green Bay's Packers were also expected to play here, completing a 6-game program which again will include a home engagement with each of the 'Skins Eastern division rivals—the New York Bulldogs (formerly the Boston Yanks) and Giants, the Philadelphia Eagles and Pittsburgh Steelers.

It was good news to both fans and the Redskins' ticket office that the Bears would appear in the Nation's Capital. Winners of six Western Division titles since 1937, four times romping to the league championship, the Bears have become a perennial power in the N. F. L.

That was when the 'Skins, after beating the Bears in a regular season game, 7-3, played host to the Chicagoans in the championship. It was 73-0 that time, favoring the Bears.

'Skins Sign Cougar Center

Receipt of the '49 contract of Center Andy Lazor, of Washington State, was announced yesterday by the Redskins. The 6-foot, 200-pounder, a teammate of another Redskin rookie, Lauri Niemi, was recommended as a brilliant line-backer

Another K. O. For Nathan

Andy Nathan of Fort Myer continued to belt out the challengers to his Military District of Washington 147-pound boxing title, scoring a 64-second TKO victory over Leonard Spaulding on last night's tourney program at the Fort Myer auditorium.

Spaulding, Fort Belvoir entry, was Nathan's second victim in two nights. On Tuesday night, Nathan kayoed Joe Renendez in 30 seconds of the second round.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Hoover Commission Minority Report to Ask For Abolition of CSC

A strong minority report on the Hoover Commission's Federal personnel recommendations will be made by James K. Pollock, a commission member. Pollock, head of the political science department of the University of Michigan, hopes to persuade several commission colleagues to sign his report.

The Civil Service Commission, as constituted, would be abolished under the Pollock plan. It would be forced to delegate to "responsible agency heads" its authority over recruitment, training, salaries, examinations and so forth. The retirement division would be transferred to the proposed new office of general services.

Pollock would create a central personnel agency to be headed by a single director who would be the principal staff arm of the President in matters of personnel policy. Pollock attacks the majority report, which will be made public soon, as covering up the shortcoming of the present Civil Service system. He charges that it suggests only half-way measures to improve the quality, moral and performance of Federal personnel.

He emphasizes, however, that his caustic remarks are not a reflection on the vast majority of Federal workers whom he believes to be hardworking and devoted, "but rather on a system which deadens initiative and enterprise, and brings disillusionment to countless able and respected public servants."

PAY: The Michigan professor cracks hard at the salary recommendations in the pending Hoover report which will suggest the ceiling on classified salaries be raised from $10,330 to $15,000. Also, that substantial salary boosts be given to employes and officials in the middle and top salary grades. Pollock comments in his tentative report:

The commission report fails to "point out that the largest portion of the employes in the Federal service are now well paid and in some instances, especially in the field, are paid more than prevailing community rates for similar types of work.

"I, therefore, wish to stress the desirability of adopting the prevailing locality rate principle in determining Federal salaries, particularly in positions of the lower and middle grades. Furthermore, in view of the present level of rates in the lower grades, I feel that with the exception of raising the salary ceiling for the highest grades, no general salary adjustments should be made in the remainder of the service unless it can be shown that current rates of pay for Federal employment are below the level of similar rates for similar work in the same competitive area."

Pollock's views are certain to receive attention when the Congress considers the Hoover personnel report.

WILSON WYATT, the Louisville attorney and former Federal housing czar, is being rumored as the new chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

J. FRED JOHNSON of Federal Communications, is the new president of the Federal Trial Examiners Conference. Other officers are: George Hall of ICC, vice president; Emory Woodale of Federal Power, secretary, and Jack Bain of Agriculture, treasurer.

GWU: CIO's new Government Workers Union yesterday chartered its first West Coast local made up of about 500 postal employes in the San Francisco area. The postal group pulled out of the left-wing United Public Workers, also CIO. The GWU is stanchly anti-Communist.

PAY DRIVE: Both the Senate and the House Civil Service Committees will stage public hearings tomorrow morning on the bill to raise the salaries of Federal executives, and to give $330 wage boosts retroactive to last July to Foreign Service and the District 7500 classified employes.

Senator O'Conor, the Senate's subcommittee chairman, said yesterday that the hearing would definitely cover the salaries of Federal executives. Among the witnesses to be called, he said, would be Budget Director Frank Pace, Comptroller General Lindsey Warren, and Arthur S. Flemming, former Civil Service Commission member. Several of the witnesses will be heard by both committees.

POSTAL PAY: The Administration is cool toward another general pay raise for postal employes. Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson made that clear the other day in an informal talk with executive committee members of the AFL's National Federation of Post Office Clerks. The union is seeking a flat $650 pay raise but Donaldson told its leaders frankly he could not help them on their project.

However, the Cabinet member left the door open to some few employe benefits which he didn't identify. He said he would be willing to indorse reforms which the employs could prove they needed.

ASSIGNMENTS: Chairman Johnston of the Senate Civil Service Committee, has set up these additional subcommittees: Veterans Preference: Long of Louisiana, Broughton of North Carolina, and They of Minnesota; Postal Rates and Services: Neely of West Virginia, McKellar of Tennessee, Frear of Delaware, Ecton of Montana, and Thye; Census: Johnston, McKellar, and Flanders of Vermont. Civil Service: Broughton, Neely, Frear, Ecton, and Hendrickson of New Jersey.

Visiting Students Join in Good Will

Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.) (right) explains Congressional procedure to Mady Weisgerberg (seated), 16, of Luxembourg. Also listening are Jacqueline Landré, 17, of Paris, and David Hegarty, 18, of County Cork, Eire

Thirty-four students from the 17 Marshall Plan countries in Europe, amazed at their own ability to get along with each other, formed an international goodwill association in Washington yesterday.

When George Albrechtskirchinger, 17, of Germany; Miguel Maria Paixao d'Oliveira, 16, of Portugal; Gabriella Gisci, 17, of Italy; Jale Ergunkan, 16, of Turkey; Rosa Thorbjornsdottir, 17, of Iceland, and 29 others realized that they were enjoying each other's company, the association seemed a must.

The students, 17 boys and 17 girls, are in Washington today after more than a month touring the United States by plane from New York to Los Angeles.

The Washington visit of the teenage ambassadors is under the joint sponsorship of The Washington Post and the Civic Education Association. Each student won an essay contest in his native land to earn the three-month trip, sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune.

At a lunch in the Family Dining Room of the Capitol yesterday, the students were welcomed by Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Representative Sol Bloom, (D., N. Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wisc.).

The goodwill association was announced by the students after Bloom had urged them to form a group by which they could tell the world of lessons learned in America.

When Bloom learned the group already had been formed, he urged each "ambassador" to write his impressions of the United States at the conclusion of the tour, and promised to see personally that their impressions were published.

The association took shape after hours of all-night arguments and discussions. There are no officers, no constitution and no treasury—only a determination.

The students—each one intelligent and mature—have been so impressed that 34 persons from 17 different countries, many of them at war with each other only a few years ago, can live together in harmony, that they have banded together to convince their countries that international harmony is possible.

Present plans call for a monthly round-robin letter, originating with the two United States delegates, and mailed to all members of the tour. In addition, the students have exchanged names and addresses of friends in their individual countries, which they hope will form the basis of an international correspondence club.

Rosemary Nugent, 17, of Dublin, Eire, said, "As soon as we are out of school and making our own living, we will all try to spend our vacations in some one of our 17 countries."

Last night, after touring the Capitol, watching the House in session and sitting in the Vice President's chair in the Senate, the group was addressed by Clinton Golden of ECA, and Robert Marpjolin, special ECA assistant from France and Secretary General of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation.

Toastmaster was Dr. Frank Monaghan, an information officer of ECA.

Court Bars Eviction by Co-Op Buyer

Judge Gallagher's Ruling Affects 300 Apartment Tenants At Naylor Gardens

In a decision affecting more than 300 occupants of the Naylor Gardens Apartments, Judge Nadine L. Gallagher ruled yesterday that a cooperative purchaser there was powerless to evict a leasehold tenant.

Winner in the action was Tenant Charles P. Liff, who occupies an apartment at 2830 31st st. se. His eviction was sought by George A. Owens, of 2656 15th st. nw., who purchased the Liff unit.

Owens' attorney announced they will appeal the Municipal Court decision.

Sold About Year Ago

The Naylor Gardens development was sold in February, 1948, by the Defense Homes Corp. to the Veterans Cooperative Housing Association for more than five million dollars, it was reported.

But according to court papers, the DHC made contracts with the tenants before the sale providing allowing them to remain in the development "until the termination of rent control in the District."

DHC officials before the sale notified the cooperative of this arrangement which Judge Gallagher ruled was "binding and operative."

More than 300 of the 748 units in Naylor Gardens are still occupied by the "carry-over" tenants. Some of them said they are unable to join the cooperative because they lack veterans' status.

According to Joseph L. Rauh, who represented Liff, two similar suits have been filed in the Naylor Gardens case, but were abated pending Judge Gallagher's decision.

Units in the development sell to cooperative purchasers for between $5600 and $8400.

3 Apartment Houses Given Rent Boosts

Five to six per cent monthly rent increases at Ordway Gardens, the General Scott and the Rocksboro apartments—totaling 498 units—were approved yesterday by the District Rent Control Administration.

The rent boosts granted to the three apartment owners represented an annual additional income of approximately $19,641. Rent Examiner James G. Tyson estimated.

The administrator authorized roughly one-half of the rent hike asked by the three petitioners. The total rent hikes requested would have amounted to an annual rental increase of $44,141.

In the largest apartment development—Ordway Gardens—the Rent Control office granted a 5.04 per cent increase on 250 units, setting monthly rentals from $31.50 for one-room and bath apartments to $98.50 for four-room and bath units. Rents formerly ranged from $30 to $84.50 per month. Meadowbrook, Inc., owners of the apartments at 27th, Ordway and Porter sts. nw., had asked for a 9.9 per cent increase.

The General Scott, located at 1 Scott Circle, nw., was given a 5.02 per cent rent boost as against a requested 13.9 per cent adjustment on its 180 apartments. The ruling sets monthly rentals at from $55.50 for 1½-room units to $102.50 for 3 rooms and bath. The old schedule ranged from $53 to $97.50.

In the 68-unit Rocksboro Apartments at 1717 R st. nw., a 6.08 percent boost was approved as opposed to a 10 per cent increase asked. Rentals will now run from $28 for one-room and bath apartments to $53 for three-room and bath units. Former rents ranged from $26.50 to $50 monthly.

Tyson said the three petitioners based their requests for rent adjustments on "substantial" rises in operating costs and real estate and water taxes since January 14, 1941.

Soldier Is Acquitted Of Assault on Girl

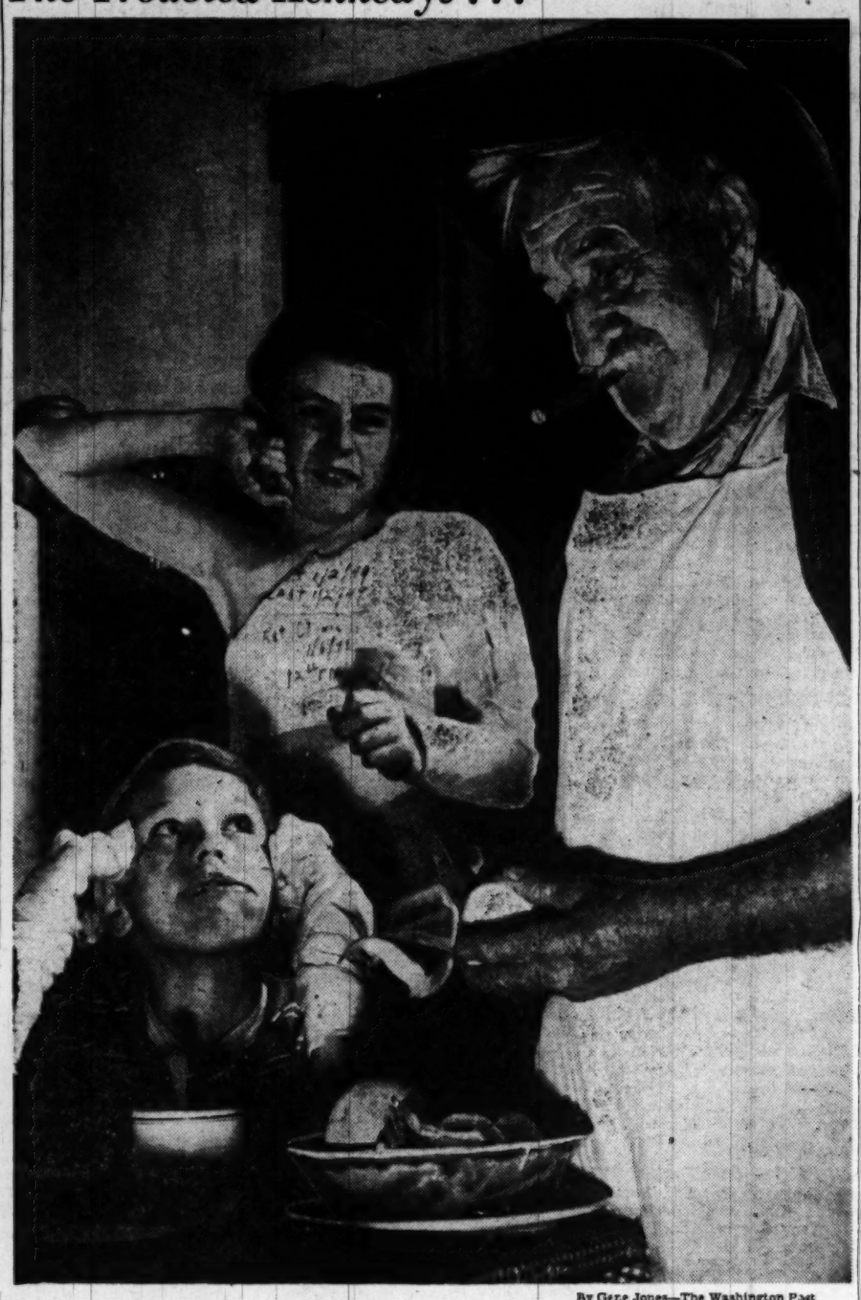
The Troubled Kennedys . . .



By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

THEIR STOGIE-SMOKING "MAMA" — When ill luck befell four members of the Kennedy family, 111 7th st. se., it was up to someone to take over the reigns of leadership. So Daniel "Grandpaw" Denton, 72, put on the apron and went to work. All the household chores fell to grandpaw. Watching as he peeled the "spuds" were Willie Kennedy, 10, who burned both hands and his mouth yesterday while attempting to light a hotwater heater which blew up in his face, and Freddy, 13, who is still in a cast after breaking both arms a month ago when he tripped while trying to jump a playground chain fence. (As Grandpaw Dan put it, "for once his foot was heavier than his head.") Monday, the boy's mother, Mrs. Ruth Kennedy, 48, slipped on ice, fell to the pavement, and is now in Doctor's Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull

Hearings Set Tuesday on Ways to Hike D.C. Revenue

Session Will Put Stress on Sales Tax; New Bill on Levy Introduced

Joint Congressional hearings on ways to increase District revenue will begin next Tuesday. They will concentrate on the proposed 2 per cent retail sales tax, but will extend, too, to other possible forms of increased revenue.

This program was fixed yesterday in an executive meeting attended by members of the Senate and House subcommittees in charge of District taxation, and by top District officials. The program was announced by Senator Lester C. Hunt, chairman of the Senate group.

To the meeting, District officials took a new draft of a combined sales tax and income tax revision bill. The bill was then introduced in the House by Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), ranking Republican member of the House tax subcommittee.

$5000 Exemption

Besides the two per cent sales tax, it calls for exempting income below $5000 from the District personal income tax, and for cutting from $10,000 to $5000 the basic exemption of the unincorporated business income tax.

Chairman Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) of the House subcommittee, had previously introduced the sales and income tax revision bill in the form it passed the House last year. Like the Bates bill, it calls for a 2 per cent sales tax, but, unlike the Bates bill, Smith's measure would exempt income below $8000 from the District personal income tax levy, and would make no change in the unincorporated business tax exemption.

The present District income tax applies to income above basic exemptions of $1,000 for the individual, $2000 for a couple, and $500 for each dependent. In the Smith and Bates bills, the dependents' exemptions would be kept in addition to the proposed new basic exemption.

While exempting the lower income brackets, the Bates bill would bring into the coverage of the District income tax many Federal employes above the $5000 limit. Present law excludes from the District income tax the official salaries of Federal employes who have a legal domicile in one of the States.

Citizens to Be Heard

Meanwhile, the House District Appropriations Subcommittee completed its hearings for District officials on the proposed 103-million-dollar city budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Subcommittee Chairman Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) indicated slight chantes that the already tight budget could be materially trimmed without cutting into present city services. Open hearings for Washington citizens on the budget will be held by Bates' group at 10 a. m. Friday. They will be in the main House Appropriations Committee room in the Capitol.

Tuesday's hearing on the District tax program will begin at 2 p. m. in the Senate District Committee room in the Capitol.

District officials said that under the revised bill introduced by Representative Bates the effective date for starting the sales tax would be the first day of the first month, 60 days after the bill is passed. The Smith bill called for starting the tax May 1. City officials have estimated that it would take at least two months to prepare for the actual operation of the sales levy.

Firemen Name Sanders

Lawson F. Sanders, of Hyattsville, has been elected treasurer of the Hyattsville Volunteer Fire Department, it was announced yesterday.

Sanders will fill the vacancy created by the death January 20 of John J. Fainter, who was serving his twenty-sixth term as treasurer at the time of his death.

Elected as trustees of the department were William D. Anderson and John L. Sullivan.

2 Persons Hurt As Crash Ends Police Chase

Two innocent victims in a three-mile police chase of a speeding car were injured last night.

Mrs. Margaret Mendenhall Smith, 32, of 20 Old Chester rd. and Darby Duvall, of 1018 Crawford dr. Rockcrest, Rockville, were hurt when the cars in which they were passengers collided at the corner of Military rd. and Beach dr. nw.

Duvall was riding with Vernon Connelly, 22, of RFD No. 1, Rockville, who had been pursued by Police Scout Car 82 from Nebraska and Connecticut aves. nw.

Connelly, unhurt, was booked at the Eighth Precinct Station on charges of passing two stop signs and speeding at 65 miles an hour. He was held pending payment of $160 collateral.

Mrs. Smith was riding with her husband, James Arthur Smith, 32, who was unhurt. Mrs. Smith was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a back injury and a bruised forehead. Duvall suffered multiple lacerations of the face and forehead.

3 Drivers Charged

Fare Injured As Trolley, Cab Crash

Two cabmen and a streetcar operator faced charges of driver violations as a result of an accident last night in which a passenger in one of the cabs were injured.

Doris Arnes, 18, of 636 G st. se., was injured when she tried to leave her taxi which she thought was about to ram a discharging cab in front at 231 1st st. ne.

Her driver, William P. Hurst, 23, of 4015 New Hampshire ave. nw., pulled out to the left and was hit from behind by a streetcar. The impact threw Miss Arnes from the cab.

She was admitted to Casualty Hospital for observation and X-ray, for possible internal injuries to her right side.

Hurst was charged by the Accident Investigation Unit with failing to stay in his lane. The driver of the discharging cab, James F. Allen, 62, of 36 R st. nw., was charged with discharging too far from the curb, and the streetcar driver, Charles R. Kiser, 26, of 1239 V st. se., was charged with following too closely. All three will have to appear before the Corporation Counsel.

Jewish Group Answers Suit of Meat Store

The Combined Congregations of Washington, Inc., representing orthodox and conservative Jews here, filed an answer yesterday to a suit filed by Marinoff & Pritt, a retail meat store at 3602 Georgia ave. nw.

The suit seeks to enjoin the Combined Congregations from allegedly interfering with the Marinoff & Pritt business. The answer declared that the market has been handling meat not strictly in accordance with the approved Hebrew ritual, and that the Combined Congregations was thus empowered to withdraw supervision of the meat store.

Home Rule Prospects Held Bright

Prospects for the District being granted home rule during the Eighty-first Congress are bright, James R. Kirkland, counsel for the Senate District Committee, said last night.

He told the board of trustees of the Central Suffrage Conference in the board room of the District Building:

"I feel more hopeful this term than ever of achieving success in obtaining home rule for the District."

Cites Four Reasons

He said he is optimistic because of four reasons, namely:

1. President Truman has stated publicly he favors home rule for the District.

2. The proponents of the home rule bill are Democrats and they are in the majority in the Eighty-first Congress.

3. Although the House District home rule subcommittee has been merged with the House District Judiciary Subcommittee, the Senate District Committee still retains its home rule subcommittee which has as members such strong advocates of home rule as Senators Kefauver, Neely and Smith.

4. The subject of home rule has come to the front at an early date in the first session of the Eighty-first Congress.

Suggests Streamlining

Kirkland suggested that if the reorganization plan outlined in the Auchincloss bill considered by the Eightieth Congress was streamlined so that the reorganization would be confined to the top level of the District Government, the bill would have better chance of passage.

"You've got to attack Congress with something that will go through," he declared.

Benjamin Sigal, a member of the District Democratic Central Committee, reported that his group is now putting the final touches to a home rule bill prepared at the request of Senator McGrath, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

To Be Submitted on Return

He said the bill would be submitted to McGrath when the latter returns to Washington this week from Florida.

The bill, Sigal said, embodies the basic qualities of the old Auchincloss bill with a modification of the powers granted to the proposed District Council.

Jesse Manbeck, treasurer of the Central Suffrage Conference, made a recommendation that the conference raise $25,000 to promote the suffrage movement in the District. The recommendation was referred to a special committee which will report on it at the next conference meeting February 9.

Medicine Alone Can't Stop VD, Scheele Says

Medical science has outstripped the social sciences in the fight against venereal diseases, social hygienists were told here yesterday.

So rapid has been medicine's advance since 1943 that even syphilis is losing its right to the title of "Killer," said Dr. Leonard S. Scheele, surgeon general, United States Public Health Service.

But medicine alone cannot win the fight, he told more than 300 members attending the annual meeting and regional conference of the American Social Hygiene Association and the Social Hygiene Society of the District of Columbia.

"What is needed, I believe," said the surgeon general, "is increased research on the part of psychiatry and the social sciences."

United States Representative Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio), urged increased emphasis on preventive activities through "education, recreation, social protection and law enforcement."

"VD infections still remain the Nation's greatest problem in communicable disease control, still bring tragedy to far too many thousand American homes," she said. "Every State, every community, needs a rounded, balanced social hygiene program for satisfactory progress in health and welfare."

Dr. William P. Herbst, urologist and president of the Social Hygiene Society of D. C., said the five most significant steps taken in Washington last year were:

Passage of a model sex-crime law which combines therapy with protection; progress in sex education, including the showing of the film, "Human Growth," to 60 adult audiences here; marriage counselling service of the society; continued restraint of prostitution and the District Health Department's anti-VD campaign.

The speakers addressed a joint luncheon meeting of the societies at Hotel Statler commemorating National Social Hygiene Day. Representative Bolton was given the William Freeman Snow Medal award by the national society for "distinguished service to humanity."

Death of Wilson Stirred Washington 25 Years Ago

PRESIDENT'S FUNERAL—Eight enlisted men are shown carrying the casket of President Woodrow Wilson from his home, 2340 S st. nw. Army, Navy and Marine Corps each sent an honor guard. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman (left), Bishop of Washington, who died in June, 1943, officiated at the last rites. Memorial services marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of Wilson's death will be held at 5 p. m. today in Bethlehem Chapel at the Cathedral

By Hugh Miller—The Washington Post

CROWDS READ DEATH NEWS—When it became known that Wilson was seriously ill, silent crowds gathered in S st. They remained through the next days, Friday and Saturday. Even though Saturday night was cold and rainy, the people never left entirely. The Washington Post's "extra," first on the streets, announced his death at 11:15 a. m. Sunday, February 3, 1924. Many in S st. wept silently, some knelt in prayer. To all, Wilson's death seemed symbolic of the closing of an epoch, the passing of a legendary figure, rather than an ordinary death

Budget Chief Says Chance Of Cut Is Slim

Director of the Budget Frank Pace, jr. declared yesterday that a big budget is inevitable for this large Nation with its big commitments and expressed a doubt that budget expenditures could or would be reduced. He made his observations in a speech at a meeting of the D. C. League of Women Voters held in the YWCA.

"There is little opportunity to reduce the budget unless Congress is willing to cut down all defense appropriations," he explained. "Seventy-six cents out of every dollar is spent on war costs."

For example, he pointed out that the war costs include not only national defense but international commitments springing out of war's aftermath, veterans benefits and reduction of the national debt.

In answer to the critics' contention that Government expenditures could be greatly reduced by firing a large number of Government employes, Pace asserted, "If outside the military, veterans and Postoffice departments, you should eliminate one out of every two employes less than 2 per cent of the total budget expenditures could be saved yearly."

Paying high tribute to Government workers, the speaker said "the cheapest and best investment the Government has is in the people who work for the Government."

Pace made a plea for greater understanding of budget expenditures in order that criticisms offered could be constructive rather than destructive. To obtain greater understanding of budget problems, he suggested that organizations hold seminars on the bureau's problems and functions.

Mrs. John Thomas, league president, presided and presented the speaker.

He first took a job as a bookkeeper with the engineers and in the course of his long career served under 19 different Chiefs of Engineers. One of them, Gen. Thomas Lincoln Casey, nicknamed Mr. Koonce "Judge" in 1893 after Koonce had unraveled a legal tangle for the Government. The title stuck with Mr. Koonce until his death.

Among the honors Mr. Koonce received were the Exceptional Civilian Service Medal, and a letter of commendation upon his retirement in November, 1946.

He was a charter member of the University Club of Washington and was for many years treasurer of the Acacia Lodge of Masons.

His survivors include his wife, Gracia Marshall, and his daughter, Mrs. Mildred Barbour, who lived with him at the Clifton Terrace Apartments, 14th and Clifton sts. nw. Burial will be private.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl of Strong Character, Cast Out by Mother Seven Years Ago, and Falsely Defamed by Her Since, Is Badgered by Sisters to Sue a Truce

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 24, the youngest of five children, and I have been self supporting, an outcast from the family, for seven years.

My mother, three sisters and brother are religious fanatics. They believe that almost everything is sinful, except reading the Bible and going to church. A woman who wears short sleeves, short hair, jewelry or cosmetics is anathema to them; and they think education beyond the three R's opens the door to iniquity.

When I was 12, my trouble started. I wanted to finish high school and mother forbade it. I appealed to the school superintendent, who notified mother that I was entitled to more education and when she refused to buy my school clothes and supplies, I was given a job in the school office to meet these expenses.

When I graduated, I won a four-year scholarship, but a few days later, when I refused to take off my class ring, mother told me to leave home and never come back. I got a job as housekeeper in a nearby town, sent mother money every week, and studied nights for three years to complete a business course.

Girl Gets Word Mother Is Dying

THEN I got a very good job at good pay and started sending mother more money, as I've done ever since. Meantime, mother gives people the impression that I've become a prostitute, and her neighbors treat me frigidly if we meet in the streets of the town where I work.

About a month ago our family doctor notified me that mother is seriously ill, and probably won't live long, as her "faith" is opposed to medical care. I felt I should make an effort to see her, and when I phoned to ask if I could visit her, she stipulated that I'd have to come begging forgiveness, ready to live according to her religious ideas.

Now I have letters from all my sisters, blaming me for mother's illness. They say she worried herself sick over my conduct, and that it is my duty to apologize and atone for all the heartache I have caused her. What should I do? To crawl to her with apologies would be hypocrisy, for I feel I have done no wrong. Yet she is my mother and I want to do what is right. Can you help me decide? Please advise.
A. B.

Mother's Stand Isn't Rational

DEAR A. B.: One of the worst things that can happen to a person at any age is to have his spirit broken; and one of the most shameful, to a young person of valor and integrity, is to be bludgeoned to his knees in feigned submission to a vindictive tyrant—ignorant, irrational, or feudally possessive, as the case may be.

As I see the picture, all that is best in your character rose up—like an army with banners—when you were 12, to crusade for your soul's deliverance from darkness into light; and judging by the success you've had, in your moral struggle against family bigotry, I should say the angels are on your side, and have been every step of the way.

Your self-help performance and steady contribution to your mother's support since she kicked you out are truly remarkable; and I fully agree with your stout conviction that you've done her no wrong that calls for repentance, in sackcloth and ashes, at her death bed. And if she has worried herself sick, or into her grave, as the saying goes, that's her mistake—for letting negative emotions consume her.

Best Be Firm, But Not Harsh

YOU DIDN'T shape her early history or mold her cast of character, and you aren't responsible for her dour temperament and evil thinking habits of mind, which were in full force and effect, grinding the older children under heel, long before you fought for basic education and scored a victory that gave you a better lease on adult living.

So don't let the family, or anyone else, badger you into feeling that you owe her stricken apologies or a beaten return to her rule for the sake of appeasement. The right course, I think, is to write her often, stressing interest and concern, saying how much you would like to see her, any time she would let you come,—and then leave the rest in the hands of God. In short, stay on your chosen course but don't be arrogant about it.
M. H.

Fetes Bid Gay Farewells To McAuliffes and Belts

Lovely Ladies Take Spotlight at Uruguayan Reception for Cubans

By Elizabeth Maguire

ONE of the best looking foursomes in town lined up yesterday to receive guests at a late afternoon reception. The host and hostess were the Minister of Uruguay and Senora de Mora, and the guests of honor were the departing Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Belt.

It was one of several dozen parties being given for the Belts before they leave February 15.

The hostess, who is one of Washington's lovliest, wore a gown of black taffeta, her hair in a low chignon and her jewels of gold and pearls.

Pretty Pictures

Two other outstandingly pretty women at the party were the wife of the new Uruguayan Ambassador, Senora de Dominguez-Campora, and the wife of the Ambassador of Ecuador, Senora de Dillon. Senora de Campora, who has been in the Capital, but a short while, is certain to become a popular diplomatic hostess.

Mrs. Claude Pepper was at the party in fetching black suit and a halo of roses. Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin attended with Judge Goodwin and their son, Norton Goodwin. "Ninety per cent of my Spanish Class is here," said Mrs. Goodwin, as she looked around. Meanwhile, the judge chatted with Senator Tom Connally.

Among the Diplomats

The Ambassador of Italy and charming Signora Tarchiani were in the company, as were the Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Caceres and the Ambassador of Guatemala and Senora de Gonzalez-Arevalo. Others included the much decorated Military Aide to the President, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, USA, Mr. and Mrs. Andre Visson, and Mr. and Mrs. John Begg of the State Department.

Yesterday's party was the first to be given by the Moras at their new house on Woodland drive. Till now, they have had an apartment at Hotel 2400. Their daughter, Miss Gladys Moras, who is a student at George Washington University, assisted at the party. Another daughter, still in pigtails, greeted guests as they came upstairs for their wraps.

Officer Famed for Curt Reply of "Nuts" to Nazis Leaves Monday for Tokyo

By Marie McNair

"WE'LL BE off bright and early Monday morning," said Mrs. Anthony McAuliffe yesterday at the farewell champagne party given for her and the general by Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d.

General McAuliffe, famous for his one word answer ("nuts") to the Nazis, is ordered to Tokyo. But there's a month's holiday in prospect which the McAuliffes will take stopping to see friends en route to San Francisco, from where they'll sail March 4.

From snow-piled streets, stepping into Mrs. Lee's drawing room was like going from winter into spring. The hostess in a pale blue and silver gown had pinned a foot long spray of South Carolina pink camellias to her shoulder. Mrs. McAuliffe wore a yellow orchid on her long white crepe gown with a sunburst of rhinestones at the neckline, and Mrs. Francis I. duPont, house guest and cousin of Mrs. Lee, also wore rose-colored camellias on her gown of black lace.

Assisting Hostess

Mrs. duPont was among those who had been asked to assist and in that group also were Mrs. Norman Makin, wife of the Australian Ambassador, her black frock and hat accented with touches of pale blue; Mrs. Harry Andrews, wife of the South African Ambassador; Mme. Kleinwaechter, wife of the Austrian Minister; Mrs. William Jennings Price; Senora de Prieto; Mrs. Atherton Macondray, wearing a becoming black hat, the flaring brim faced with dusty pink; Mrs. V. W. Wolfe, Mrs. Joseph Crockett, Mrs. Albert J. Bowley, Mrs. T. C. McDavid, the Misses Eleanor and Marion Abbott and Miss Dorothy Tirrell.

In the young group were Miss Patricia McAuliffe, daughter of the guests of honor, who wore a pale blue satin gown; Mrs. George C. Clark, jr., Miss Zore Butler and Miss Leo Novak.

The Belgian Ambassador, Baron Robert Silvercruys, came early; the Chief of Staff and Mrs. Omar Bradley arrived late. With them was Mrs. Bradley's sister, Mrs. Earle Stewart, visiting them from Oregon.

Dr. Compton Attends

Also there were Dr. and Mrs. Karl Compton — he's the famous scientist who now heads the National Military Establishment Research and Development Board.

Mrs. Robert Eichelberger and Mrs. Edmund Brewer Montgomery chatted together on a seat in the dining room where a Houdon plaque—one of an extant three so I'm told, hangs over the fireplace.

Among others there were Senator and Mrs. Burnet Maybank, Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador; the former Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, being welcomed back to town; Mr. and Mrs. Eldon P. King, Mrs. Russell Bennett, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Shears, Miss Laura Belle Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell, with the former's mother, visiting here from Xenia, Ohio; Miss Dorothea Drayton and Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox.

So True, said a Few—

Varga's Pretty Dream House Only a Nightmare to Wives

By Lucia Brown

Comments ranging all the way from "fantastic!" to "absolutely correct!" greeted Gideon M. Varga's remarks on the inefficiency of the Nation's housewives here yesterday.

Mr. Varga, a Columbia University industrial engineer, wrote a piece for the American magazine saying women waste so much time and energy keeping house they just wouldn't be tolerated on an industrial payroll. A United Press dispatch about it appeared in The Washington Post yesterday and the reaction of local homemakers was decided—and divided.

"He's thinking about grandmother's day," said Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, wife of the Wyoming Senator. "The most inefficient thing about the American housewife was the old-fashioned kitchen. Improvements in kitchens lagged far behind improvements in industrial plants.

"Now, though," she said, "country and city women alike have work-saving kitchens — if they can afford them. And they've been gleaning the same sort of suggestions he makes from women's magazines for years. I really think the criticism is unjustified today."

Some Agreement

"That man's going to be in a lot of trouble in a few days!", laughed Mrs. F. Edward Hebert, whose husband is a Representative in Congress from Louisiana. "Women all over the country will be after his scalp!

"I agree with a lot of his ideas, though. Sitting down to prepare food, wash dishes, and iron clothes is a lot more restful. I believe in taking all the short cuts you can. I think most younger housewives feel the same way, though older women may stick to slower ways of doing things, the ways they are used to."

"He's All Wrong!"

Mr. Varga's ideas on dishwashing, bed-making, and ironing are all wet, however, in the opinion of Mrs. Mary Dodd Lewis, who is official hostess for her father, Norris E. Dodd, director of the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization. She agrees with most of Mr. Varga's suggestions, but not those.

"You just can't get the covers really even and free of wrinkles if you make up one side of a bed entirely, then the other," said Mrs. Lewis. "And when you sit down to iron you don't get the proper pressure on the board to do a good job. Besides, you have to get everything assembled within arm's reach before you start and that's more trouble than standing up to iron. I never could dishwash satisfactorily sitting down, either. You can't reach far enough. It seems a lazy way of doing things, anyway.

"His point about keeping things stored close to the place they'll be used is good, though," added Mrs. Lewis, who was reared on an Oregon ranch where there were often 20 at table. "It not only applies in the kitchen, but in storing linens and clothes as well."

Agreeing with Mr. Varga about women wasting time and energy in housekeeping was Mrs. Stephen Pace, wife of Representative Pace of Georgia.

"I certainly felt when I read that article that I wasn't as systematic as I should be," she said. "Most Southern women were used to having servants but have gotten a lot more efficient about housework since the war and the shortage of help came along."

Mrs. Richard W. Dirksen, of 3022 Wisconsin ave. nw., had substantially the same ideas on the subject.

"My first reaction to Mr. Varga's remarks was irate," she said." But in thinking it over, I decided I am inefficient and waste a lot of energy. He's probably right, though I could take the advice a lot better from an experienced housewife than from him!

Ideas Fantastic

"He's got a nerve!" was the heated comment of another young Washington wife. "Most probably right, though I could wonder if he ever tried making up one half of a bed, then the other? I'll warrant it wound up crooked and wrinkled. And as for washing dishes sitting down, it's no fun to have water running down your arms or splashed in your lap. The average housewife can think up a lot more sensible ways of cutting corners than Mr. Varga!"

Mrs. Lester Boykin of 2825 of his ideas are fantastic. I Columbia engineer was making a mountain out of a molehill. He exaggerated the number of miles now required for each job (one billion needless ones a year, says Mr. V.) and blew up the whole problem out of all proportion, believes Mrs. Boykin.

"Maybe some women do waste time in doing their work, but s odo men," she said. "Besides, if they've got the time and like to do their work that way, why shouldn't they? Some families like nice, smooth sheets and don't want drainers full of dishes sitting around, so why not iron sheets and dry dishes? It's all a matter of preference."

A Glimpse of Spring

Newest Spots Before Your Eyes, Gay and Pretty in Every Size

By Peggy Preston

IT'S hard to look at fashion this year and not see spots before your eyes. Polka dots and tiny, compact prints are used for everything from petticoat ruffles to your best spring suit.

The vogue for figured fabrics has caught on all the way along the line. It originated in the "name" collections by high-fashion, high-priced houses. But already it is cutting a pretty figure in medium and low-priced clothing. Rayons and cottons are dotted and flowered just as effectively as the more precious fabrics such as pure silk shantung, tie silks and surahs.

Polka dots are top favorites. Pinpoint dots, coin dots, saucer dots are but a few of the sizes being used. And don't be surprised if you see all three sizes combined, quite delightfully, in one costume. An especially effective outfit is of dotted silk crepe, with overskirt of organza, splattered with huge coin dots.

Prints are inclined to be small, and on the quaint side. Little flowered muslins and silks have crowded out the splashy, big-blossomed print. Line prints, done in geometrical patterns have a niche all their own, for they have a way of slimming the silhouette.

If you've a yen for a silk print for Easter you won't have any difficulty finding one to suit your fancy in the local shops. You'll find that the majority are being sold as "costume suits"—as two-piece ensembles, rather than as one-piece dresses.

Some sort of little wrap, such as a flyback bolero, capelet or stole usually accompanies the simplest dress. Jacket dresses, with complete dress and matching, lined jacket, are important. These ensembles, as practical as they are pretty, are good choices for spring as they can be worn throughout the months of increasingly warm weather.

The print dress with redingote coat in a solid color is probably the best bet of the season for a girl with a budget problem. Here she has, actually a three-way outfit. It serves as dress and coat; dress to be worn with other coats; coat to be matched with various dresses or suits.

POLKA DOTS take a bow in this jacket dress of lustrous tie silk. Bodice of the dress is of white with brown dots, skirt and jacket are brown, sprinkled with white. It is worn with white straw bonnet, trimmed with a wing of white feathers, white gloves and mink scarf

Fy Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

THE Junior Miss finds the answer to her wardrobe problem in this two-piece ensemble, the rayon dress of navy, printed with white and red flowers and the redingote of navy taffeta. Coat can double as a dress. And all for $25!

"COSTUME SUIT" of printed rayon has compact geometrical design in red and black. Deep fold at bottom of jacket forms two large pockets, matching the cuff treatment. Leather belt is red. Accessories are black. All ensembles available at Jelleff's

London Lesson:

He Couldn't Negotiate The Curves

By Geraldine Hill

London. (U.P.).—Captain Molyneux has learned his sad lesson. You can't inject sex in the clothes of English society women.

Last season Molyneux, top designor, kicked over his conservative traces and built busts and bustles on his dresses.

His clients, mostly society darlings from England's stately homes, shuddered at his daring and bought their clothes elsewhere.

American and French women may like to play up their curves, but English women, no. So Molyneux has returned to his flat chested, flat seated creations.

Molyneux's 23 spring and summer models were flat and classic. Skirts hung about 13 inches from the ground. Jackets were mid-hip length and had big satchel pockets, some stretching halfway round the back.

Topcoats were either loose or princess style. One beige coat had seamless raglan sleeves and was fastened by a stream of tiny buttons.

Soft, simple afternoon dresses were made up in light weight plaid woolens and checks, occasionally they were worn with fringed stoles. Hips were decorated with appliques.

Molyneux used silk jersey generously for day and evening wear. One little gem was a sand-colored ensemble of silk jersey, the sleeves on its blouse bracelet-length, worn with either a pencil slim day skirt or a graceful evening skirt gathered into folds from a wasp waist line.

Paris Deserts Buyers for U. S. Tourist Trade

Paris, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—The 1949 spring fashion season opened today with a display of low-budget models aimed more at the American tourist than foreign buyers.

Bernard Sagardoy, former designer for Marcel Rochas, opened a two-week session with a series of creations priced at one third less than the bigger houses.

Some 400 of France's prettiest girls will display over 1500 Paris creations to foreign buyers and experts. Eighty top Paris houses will participate in the shows.

Sagardoy showed a series of suits of striped material with slightly sloping shoulders, kimono sleeves and gently tapering waists. His straight skirts were 12 inches from the floor.

He achieved the "Paris look" through clever cutting of the striped material to give trick zig-zag effects over the hips and plunging lapels.

A suit called "Hamlet" featured a horizontally striped fabric in two shades of navy blue with a thin white band. It was priced at 60,000 francs (about $1855), about one-third less than the average suit in the larger houses.

Worth, Paquin, and Bruyere will stage big showings tomorrow. Dior, Jacques Fath, Schiaparelli and Balmain will join the list later this week or early next week.

To Allay Any Doubt:

The Antiques on Exhibit At the Statler This Week Are Valuable; Not Priceless

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

ANYONE care to make a present to the British Embassy? If so, there's a handsome Chippendale card table and a fine Hepplewaite chest which the Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks, very much admired at the antique show now in its next-to-last day at the Statler Hotel. Two up-and-coming Britishers, the Misses Gillingham and Saint, shipped and chaperoned a small collection of mouth-watering eighteenth century furniture to the show where it stands, in more or less lonely perfection, amidst a welter of hooked rugs, early American glass and miscellaneous bibelots of doubtful origin. Milling with the mob as it stopped to stare at the English furniture, this department was amazed to hear many ask "Is it for sale?" Sure, everything's for sale. The powers running the show should take steps to dissipate the financially unprofitable attitude of respectful, museum sightseeing. It's induced, no doubt, because there's a small admission fee. Oh, yes, is a spot of interesting jewelry needed to brighten your New Look? Leslie Biffle's sisters, Bernice and Beatrice, who've set themselves up in the antique business, have some charming oddments. Notably, to our taste, an early nineteenth century ornament of intricately set pearls and small diamonds, a more modern, nicely gobby, coral cabochon ring traced with a minute design in pinpoint diamonds.

Art and Culture

SOME realistic wise guy quipped: "Now that Washington has no theater and its orchestra is quivering on the brink of financial disaster, all we have to do to completely extinguish culture is to picket the National Art Gallery!" Fortunately, there's just the wee-est snitch of exaggeration to this pathetic plaint, lately our languishing local culture has been given a vigorous push by the National Women's Association of Arts and Letters. Their Tuesday afternoon meetings—or should we say conferences?—at which some distinguished woman is invited to speak—are really stimulating and fun. Next week, at the Andre Vissons' house, Nina Tallon will do the talking. Mme. Tallon, who directed Broadway's currently most sensational play, "The Mad Woman of Chaillot" (remember Richard Coe's elegant review of same?), is a niece of France's several-times Premier, Edouard Herriot, and hails from the pleasant wine district of Beaujolais. She's still on the young side, a blonde, and fairly recently married to Austrian actor Oscar Karlweis. When not toiling in the theater, Mme. Tallon manages her own farm near Beaujolais and now, living temporarily in New York, she counteracts nostalgia by dining nightly at the Beaujolais restaurant. During the war France's outstanding lady director, assisted by Mrs. Charles E. Riggs, founded the Treasure Chest Organization which raised over $50,000 to send new books to children overseas. The Treasure Chest is still going strong. Our military having taken over, the Army is delivering acquired books to Germany, the Navy to China. Giradoux's play, incidentally, was almost produced some years ago as a vehicle for the late Laurette Taylor. Cinema fans who liked Oscar Karlweis in the entertaining Western, "Yellow Sky," will be interested to learn he's on leave from Hollywood's flesh pots and is busy producing "Harvey" in Vienna.

Congressional Librarian Ranks DAR Third of U. S. Archivists

The Daughters of the American Revolution were asked by the Librarian of Congress yesterday to map out an extensive program of microfilming their census and genealogical records and thereby join the National Archives and the Library of Congress as the three great collectors of historical data.

The Librarian of Congress, Dr. Luther Evans, addressed the society at the dedication of its new Genealogical Library at Memorial Continental Hall, 17th and D sts. nw. In proposing the microfilming project to the DAR, he explained that the National Archives couldn't undertake the work since it involves local records over which it has no jurisdiction. And the Library of Congress, he added, has too many other responsibilities.

But he said the Congressional Library would be glad to help the DAR compile its microfilm collection and that it would also furnish extra storage space.

Dr. Evans said that he, like most other librarians, used to "poke fun at" ancestor-seekers because they were usually just looking for self-glorification.

But now, he says he realizes that genealogical records are the first source of historical data; that history is based entirely upon biographies of men.

Dr. Wayne C. Grover, national archivist who also spoke at the dedication, said he hopes the National Archives can cooperate to the continuous development of the Genealogical Library.

The new Genealogical Library will mean a bigger DAR, it was implied by the president general, Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne. In her dedication address Mrs. O'Byrne said that for years the DAR Genealogical workers have been handicapped through the lack of adequate facilities, but now "We will do everything possible to speed up the work of passing upon membership applications."

"No society," she went on, "can attain its highest development unless it plans to include within its ranks the ultimate member . . . and it is incumbent that we omit no effort to enroll that ultimate member."

Ask Anne
About Wedding Etiquette Problems

Is it permissible to include both a maid and matron of honor in a wedding party? If so, do they both go to the altar with the bride, groom, and best man, and which one should carry the ring at a double-ring ceremony? Also, what position in the wedding party do they take for the processional and recessional?

J. L.

Yes, wedding parties often include both a matron of honor and a maid of honor. They can be dressed alike and walk together in the processional. Or their gowns may contrast and each walk alone. The one whose title is purely honorary precedes the actual witness, who will stand by you at the altar. The one standing beside you at the altar holds your bouquet when necessary during the ceremony and also hands you the ring. Or, as in many double ring ceremonies, the best man can carry both rings to the altar and hand them to the bride and groom just before vows are exchanged. In the recessional, it would be well to have an extra usher or groomsmen to walk with either the matron or maid of honor. As to which of the girls stands beside you during the ceremony, you'll have to decide that on some such basis as the closeness of your friendship or which friend is the eldest.

Since moving into our new home two weeks ago, we have done all of our "settling" except hanging pictures, what-not shelves, etc., hoping you would soon be answering someone's query about how to prepare nails so as to be sure of not cracking and chipping the plaster. Or is it the spot on the wall where the nail is to be driven that is prepared in some way? Is it with wax or soap? M. M.

Waxing or soaping a nail or screw will make it go into wood or plaster more easily. However, the best way to keep plaster from cracking when driving a nail is to put adhesive tape or a criss-cross of good quality Scotch tape over the area, then drive the nail through it. The tape can be removed afterward if it shows, although properly hung pictures hide both nail and adhesive tape.

For hanging large and heavy pictures or cabinets, you would do well to use one of the devices made especially for this purpose. Inquire about toggle bolts in a hardware store or the picture department of a department store.

Here's a suggestion for N. F., who asked about getting the meat out of a cocoanut: Place the drained cocoanut in the oven at a low temperature (or after turning it off on bake day) and leave it a little while (15 or 20 minutes). Then one crack with the hammer, and the shell all falls off. This doesn't dry out meat, either. P. W. S.

Hold Your Head High For a Young Throatline

By Ida Jean Kain

HIGH MORALE, muscle tone and proud head carriage make for a beautiful, young throatline. Creams and astringents, while valuable beauty measures, are only on the surface.

A CHIN STRAP worn in a deluxe beauty salon with heavenly smelling cream may give a lift, but it's only temporary. To be at all effective in reducing double chins, the strap should be tied tightly across the mouth—at snack time.

Poor head carriage is behind most chin troubles. This allows the muscles under the chin to fall down on the job. Naturally that makes an ideal parking spot for excess calories. Add fat to flabby muscles and the inevitable result is double chins.

But whether or not excess calories bloom there, feeble muscles let the chinline sag, and age.

THAT LINE at the back of the neck is the test. It should be held almost straight . . . always. That means while working, bending, reading, walking . . . all the time. When that line is held up and straight, the chin is level—not tilted up, jutted out or dropped down. There is neither a stretch nor a sag. The muscles are firmly on the job. And remember, the best exercise is the continual practice of good posture . . . this goes double for the chinline.

EXERCISE HELPS restore tone to flabby chin muscles, but in taking chin beautifiers it is important not to overly stretch the skin. Here's an exercise which tones without stretching . . .

POSITION: Sitting, in good posture, head erect.

MOVEMENT: Turn head to one side as far as possible, then tilt the chin upward. Lower the chin, turn back and to other side. Make sure to turn head first before tipping chin up. And lower the chin before circling to other side. Repeat six times, slowly.

That Worn Spot

Darn the worn carpet with a rug wool carefully matching the color. It will take away so much of the shabby appearance and will cause the rug to wear much longer if mended before it is very far gone.

Liver Is Sturdy Food

Liver offers such good food value it should be on family menus at least once a week; saute it and serve with potato puffs and slivered green beans. Or broil it with bacon and accompany it with creamed potatoes and a tangy cole slaw.

For Better Meringues

For especially good meringues use brown instead of white sugar; one cup to an egg white, then when beaten until stiff fold in chopped pecan nutmeats, and bake as usual.

● The luncheon will be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel on Wednesday, February 9, at 1 P. M. Tickets, at $3 each, may be purchased in the book departments of Woodward & Lothrop and Kann's and in these book stores: Airport Book Shop, Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Better Mouse Trap, Community Book Shop, Francis Scott Key Bookshop, David Pearlman's, Paul Pearlman's, Pursell's, Savile Book Shop and Whyte's.

E. G. Carey Heads Stellar Speakers' List

Ernestine Gilbreth Carey, one of the dozen described in her book "Cheaper by the Dozen," will speak at the next Washington Post Book and Author luncheon, Wednesday, February 9.

MRS. CAREY

Taking their places at the microphone with her will be Dr. David Bradley, whose log, "No Place to Hide," chronicled the Bikini atom tests; Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, music critic and author of "A History of Popular Music in America," and Sterling North, Washington Post book critic whose recent book "So Dear to My Heart" has been made into a motion picture.

"Cheaper by the Dozen," co-authored by Ernestine Gilbreth Carey and her brother, Frank Gilbreth, jr., is the story of the home life of an efficiency expert and his twelve children, whom he raised on motion study principles. They found themselves learning French in the bathtub and higher mathematics while eating dinner. The children had their tonsils out en masse as a contribution to their father's investigation of the technique of surgery, and their efforts to learn touch typing were recorded in the newsreels.

Though ony two authors' names appear on the jacket of "Cheaper by the Dozen," there is really a third collaborator—the United States Postoffice. The book was written while Frank was in South Carolina on the staff of the Charleston News and Courier and Ernestine was a New York department store executive. They thank their early work on the family newspaper, the Ambi, for the success of this long-distance collaboration. They also feel a deep gratitude to their training in motion study—supplied by their father, often against their wishes—since it enabled them both to find time to write a best-seller while holding down full-time jobs.

The luncheon will be held in the Presidential Room of the Hotel Statler. Tickets at $3 are available in the book departments of Kann's and Woodward & Lothrop and in these book stores: Airport Book Shop, Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Community Book Shop, Francis Scott Key Shop, David Pearlman's, Paul Pearlman's, Pursell's Savile Book Shop and Whyte's.

Equal Pay Bill Chances 'Good'

"Chances for passage of some form of the 'equal pay for equal work' bills now before Congress are excellent," Warren D. Mullin, associate editor of the Kiplinger Letters, told members of the Washington Soroptimist Club yesterday at a luncheon meeting.

The two bills providing for "equal pay for equal work" have been sponsore dby Representative Chase Going Woodhouse of Connecticut, and Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas of California. Similar in content, the House bills hit the pay level problem on a national basis and aim at making the national law applicable through Interstate Commerce channels, according to the speaker.

He pointed out that the greatest disparity of wages between men and women is in the professional groups. In discussing "Legislation Affecting Women" he predicted that women's organizations would support the President's National Health Program as well as Federal Aid to Education. He expressed a doubt that Congress would pass the health program in its entirety this session. "The health program is too broad to absorb in one year," he explained. "But certain phases of the program will be passed by Congress."

Mullin expressed a belief that the Federal Aid to Education and Public Housing bills would be passed by the Eighty-first Congress.

Pointing out that the battle between the proponents and opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution increases in intensity yearly, he declared that the "Equal Rights Amenders" appeared to gain strength yearly. At the last count the "amenders" had over 100 sponsors in the House and more than 30 in the Senate.

Mrs. Eva Boothby Bray introduced the speaker, and Mrs. Edith Jarvis, president, presided.

During the luncheon Paul Hume, Washington Post music critic, gave two solos and made an appeal on behalf of the National Symphony Orchestra's fund drive.

First Lady Heads 'Publication Day' Prominent Guests

Mrs. Truman, Senator Margaret Chase Smith, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder and their daughter, Miss Drucie Snyder, are among those who will attend the "Publication Day" party at the Arts Club on February 7 for Bess Furman and her new book "Washington By-Line."

Miss Furman, who is Mrs. Robert B. Armstrong, will have her husband and her twins, Ruth Eleanor and Robert Furman Armstrong with her at the party.

Former Senator Hattie Caraway has promised to be there and others who have accepted are Miss Frieda Miller, Representative Chase Going Woodhouse, Miss Frances Perkins, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. James Helm, Commander and Mrs. Benjamin H. Lingo and their daughter, Miss Jane Lingo; members of the New York Times staff and the Women's National Press Club.

THE DISTRICT LINE

by Bill Gold

Our Sense of Humor Is In a State of Comma

Dramatic Critic Dick Coe doesn't mind our enjoying his movie listings, so long as we don't overlook the commas.

When a District Liner howled at the Warner's showing of "a comedy about a GI who gets his pal's gal Stateside by marrying her at 11:10 a. m.; 1:15, 3:20, 5:25, 7:35 and 9:40 p. m.," Dick howled:

"Your reader overlooked the comma which appeared after the word 'her.'"

For example, Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw. submits another one:

"Capitol — 'My Own True Love' . . . the story of a son who falls in love with his father's fiancee at 11.0[illegible] a. m., 1:45, 4:30, 7:15 and 9:55 p. m."

Complains Blanche: "I have trouble finding a man who will fall in love with me at any time, let alone on such a precise schedule."

FAMILIAR LOCALE

Premier Stalin says he'll be glad to meet President Truman in Russia, Poland or Czechoslovakia.

The offer sounds mildly encouraging, except for the probability that, wherever we meet with the Russians, we'll soon find ourselves back at good old Loggerheads again.

I'm reminded of the British communique during the war, announcing that "the German air force dropped its bombs at random during last night's attack."

The next day the German High Command solemnly issued a statement that "severe damage was inflicted by our aircraft on the town of Random."

190,000 ANGELS WANTED FOR GOOD MUSIC

In most American cities, the opening of the annual symphony fund drive is a "society event" rather than a popular civic movement.

We see newspaper stories about Mrs. Giltrocks buying the first season box, and we see pictures of Mrs. Grandame presenting a check to the orchestra's conductor. But Joe Public takes little part in these events.

Howard Mitchell, the new conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, thinks it's a pity that the support for good music comes from such a small portion of the population. Mitchell says:

"Almost everybody enjoys hearing good music; our support should come from a comparably wide cross section. District Liners must feel that it's their orchestra, and that they have a vital interest in its work."

Mitchell's remarks are particularly timely because the orchestra today opens its drive for $190,000, to guarantee not only the regular season ahead, but also the popular Water Gate series.

The young conductor drives home his point with these words:

"Suppose we had an 'angel' who was willing to put up the whole $190,000; and suppose, also, that we could get 190,000 District Liners to put up $1 each. Isn't it self-evident that a true community orchestra should be supported by the community, rather than by a small number of patrons?"

In plain English, Howard hopes there will be a lot of $1, $2 and $5 contributions. "We'll play our hearts out for you," he says, "if we know you're with us."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Large white tomcat; friendly, affectionate, full of tricks." (Victor 0109 after 5 p. m.).

"Pure-bred alley tabby, very affectionate and polite; needs to get away from our young daughter, who pulls her tail." (Emerson 5552).

SITE UNSEEN

The other day we carried an item about a newspaper published in a place called Hungry Horse. I've never been there, and wondered where and what it was.

Thomas M. Blaisdell of Blacksburg, Va., furnishes the answer. He says Hungry Horse is the area just south of Glacier National Park, where the Government is now constructing one of the largest dams in the world. He adds:

"On one of the highways leading from Columbia Falls to Hungry Horse, there is a city called Dam Town. A sign at the city limits informs motorists that the settlement they are approaching is the country's 'Best Dam Town by a Dam Site.'"

I never saw a frozen cow;
I never hope to see one.
But I can tell you this right now:
I'd rather see than be one.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—A new play recently opened in Paris. It's called "Das Kapital," and is a dramatization of Karl Marx's stay in England, and of his writing his book on communism. Jacques Deval, author of the hit comedy, "Tovarich," was invited to attend the dress rehearsal and to give his opinion about the merits of the play. He studied the scenes in which Marx's secretary argued against the publication of the book . . . "The only way to make this play a hit," Deval advised, "is to show Marx, at the end, destroying his manuscript."

Mr. and Mrs. Winston Churchill attended a dinner party at the home of, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. The Duke proposed a toast to the distinguished couple, who had just celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary . . . Churchill acknowledged the toast by lifting his own glass, nodding to his wife and to the Windsors, and said: "To great romances, and to happy marriages—one of God's greatest gifts to the human race."

One of Churchill's wartime aides discussed the former Prime Minister's opposition to Stanley Baldwin. He felt that Baldwin had won power by election promises he felt would weake England, if the promises wer fulfilled, and strengthen Ger many . . . During the heaviest o the German air-raids Churchil was awakened by a warning tha the bombardment was so heavy it might be wise to seek safer quarters. "A bomb has just hit Lord Baldwin's home," was the report . . . "Really?" replied Churchill, before rolling over and returning to sleep. "What base ingratitude."

The National Council of the Americans for Democratic Action will convene in Chicago in April to decide whether the organization will work within the Democratic Party or continue to work independently. Oscar Levant was invited to lecture at the University of California, and replied: "Do you mind if I go through high school, first?"

'Friends' Can Help in RFC Loans

By Drew Pearson

For some time it has been whispered around the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that if you wanted Government loans you had to employ certain "friends" or lobbyists.

Hancock

The RFC, of course, is paid for by all the taxpayers and is supposed to operate for the benefit of them all. Furthermore, loans are supposed to be granted on their merit, not through political pull or with extra cost to the man borrowing the money.

However, here is the story of a small business firm, the Strickland Furniture Co. of High Point, N. C., when it tried to borrow from the RFC to complete construction of a factory. Strickland's loan application was approved by the RFC regional office in Charlotte, N. C., but when forwarded to Washington nothing happened. So Strickland came to Washington to push the loan himself.

"Regardless of which office we had appointments with," he says in a sworn affidavit, "from day to day it became increasingly obvious a Mr. Ernest Howard, who, we understand, was from North Carolina, was always present and raised the main objections."

Howard, chief of the RFC's business loan section, is married to the youngest sister of Frank Hancock of Oxford, N. C. Hancock, a former Congressman, went to school with Secretary of the Army Royall at the University of North Carolina and was a member of the subcommittee of Congress which helped create the RFC.

Finally, after getting the runaround in Washington, Strickland was advised by North Carolina friends to retain Hancock for the purpose of putting the loan through the RFC. At their first meeting, says Strickland, Hancock called in his brother-in-law. Within 10 minutes Howard remarked to Frank Marks, vice president of the Strickland Furniture Co.:

"Don't call me Howard. Call me Ernest."

After that, everything was palsy-walsy, and objection to the RFC loan vanished. Within three weeks a loan of $225,000 was offered by the RFC, and this was later raised to $350,000. Strickland in turn paid Hancock $6000, with additional fees later.

Telltale Evidence

If there is any doubt about the part which brother-in-law Howard played in the deal, the letters of former Congressman Hancock give revealing evidence. This column has obtained photostat copies of these letters. On January 9, 1947, Hancock reported to Strickland on his contacts with his brother-in-law inside the RFC.

"In keeping with your suggestion," the former Congressman wrote, "I discussed with Mr. Howard the matter of incorporating Strickland Furniture Co. as soon as practicable and he agrees that it is the proper thing to do.

"I have been devoting most of my time to your program this week, and I am hopeful that some satisfactory decision may be forthcoming next week after Mr. Howard returns to his desk and has an opportunity to discuss the amended application with the proper officials in the Washington office."

Again, on December 15, 1947, when an increase in the Strickland loan was about to come through, Hancock reported:

"I notified Ernest (Ernest Howard) to notify you and Bob McNeill that I was leaving on the afternoon train. As you can well understand, I was immediately notified of the board's (RFC board) action, which the chairman told me over the telephone was not too easy to work out."

Then, discussing the fee he should be paid, Hancock hinted at his inside contacts as follows: "I realize, however, that some of the best things in the way of service do not always require the longest time and that compensation of my kind must include other considerations."

Strickland says that Howard could have been under no illusions as to the manner in which his brother-in-law was using him; for, on one occasion, when Strickland mentioned the loan to Howard at a dinner in the Washington Hotel, Howard remarked:

"What are you doing, trying to bypass by brother-in-law?"

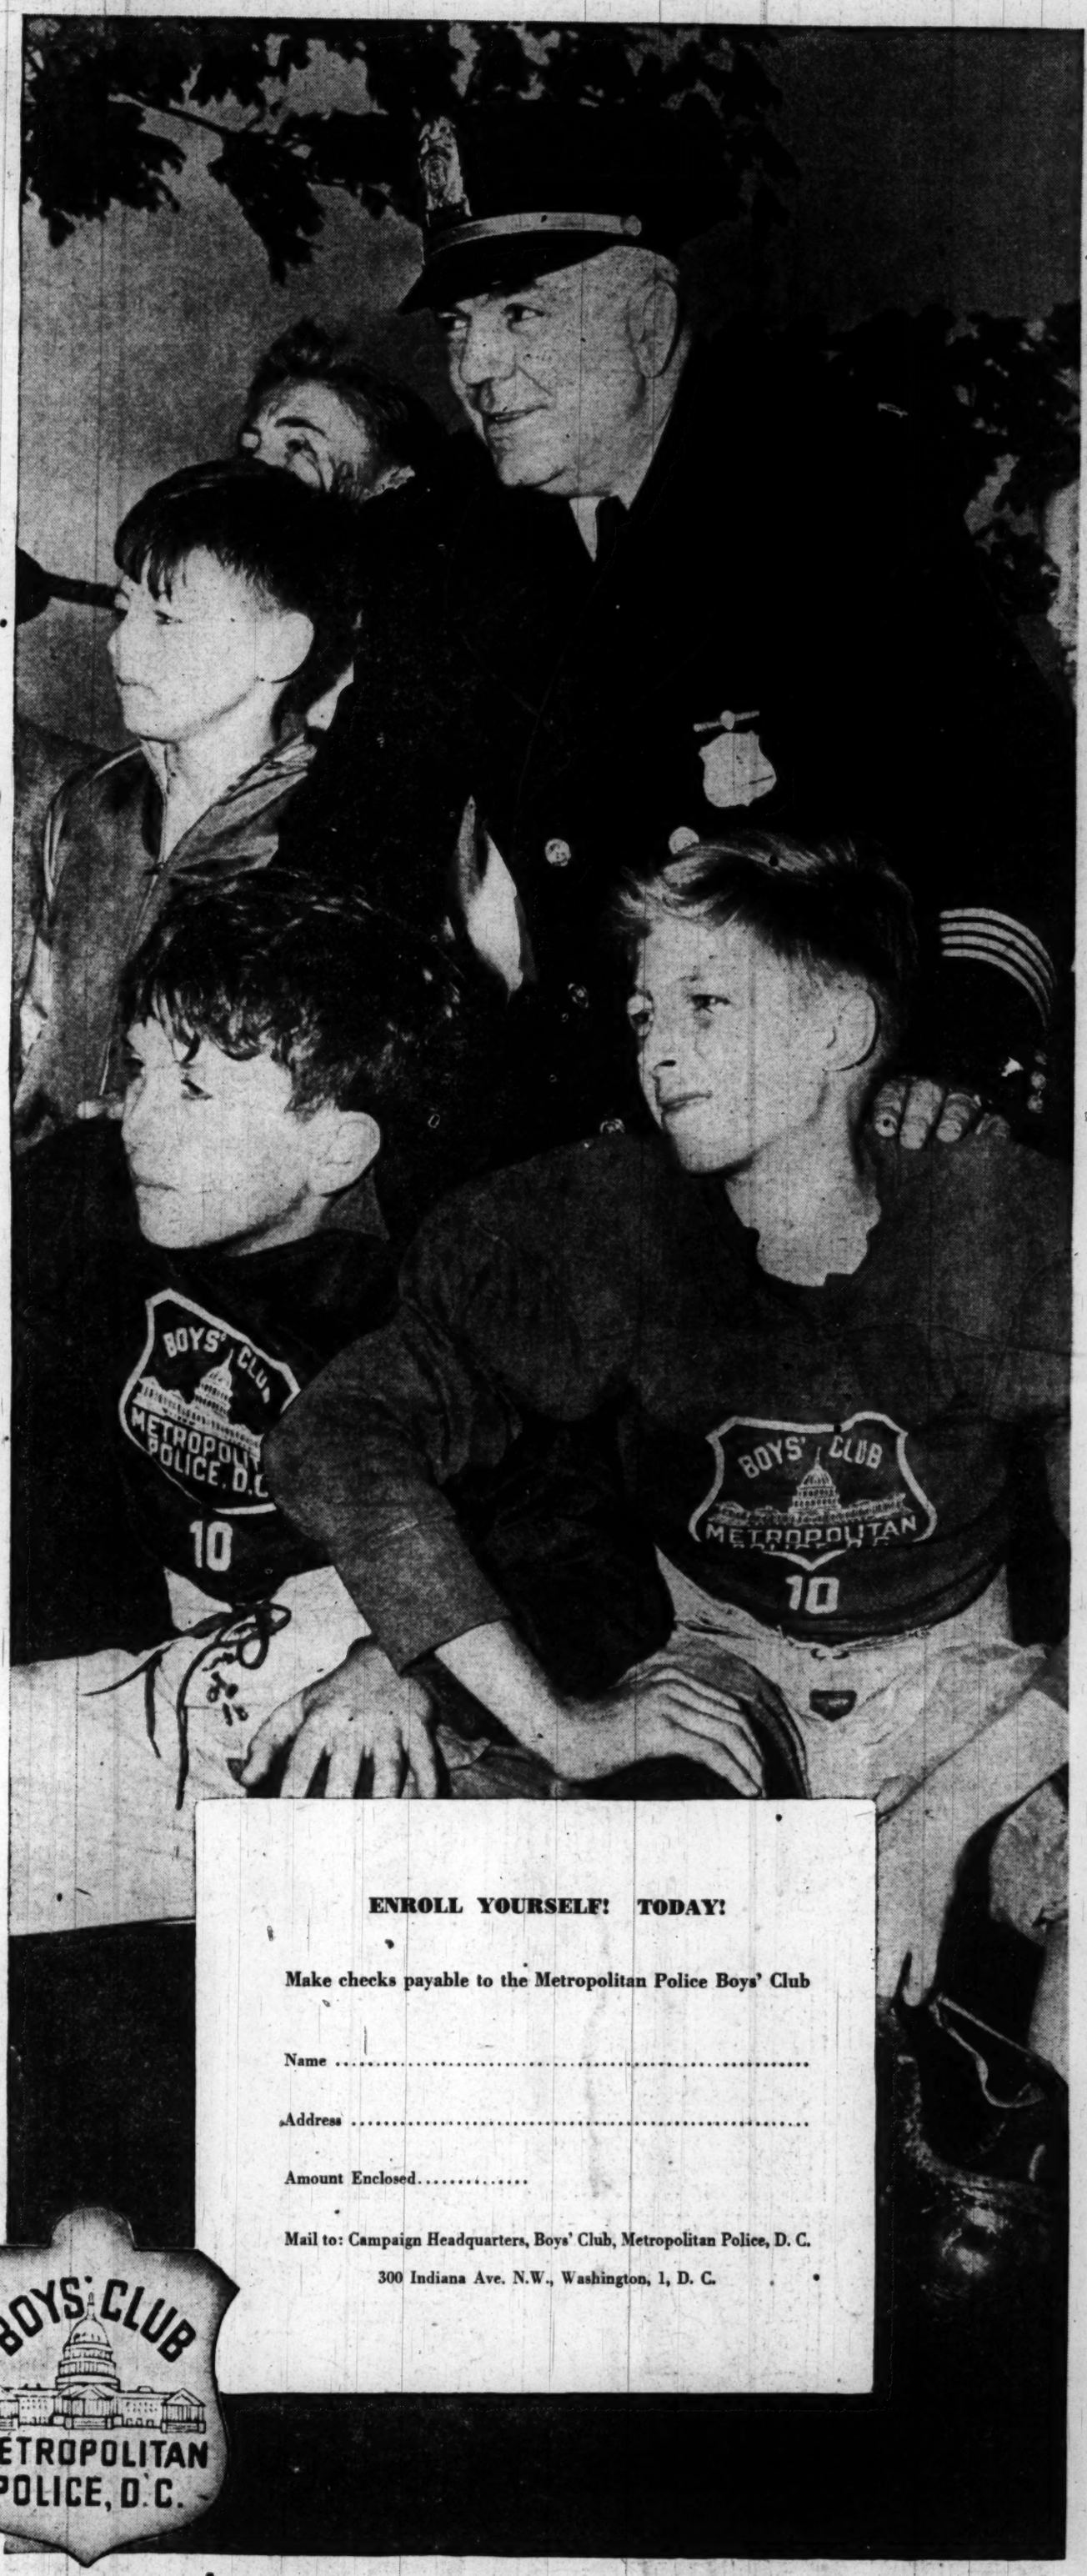
You are looking at America's Future!



• Ask Superintendent of Police, Robert J. Barrett, he can tell you the facts: The youth of today is the citizen of tomorrow! The future of America is being molded now . . . and not by words but by deeds. Major Barrett is a busy man . . . busy directing the activities of our Police Department . . . but not too busy to understand that the way to build future citizens is to start at the foundation. Major Barrett and every officer of our police force know the value of our Metropolitan Police Boys' Clubs. These prominent citizens have served as presidents of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club since its inception 15 years ago: Raymond F. Garrity, John A. Remon, H. Clifford Bangs, Robert C. Simmons, Morris Cafritz and James E. Colliflower. This work has been magnificently supported by our city fathers, the District Commissioners.

• At the present, there are seven Police Boys' Clubs in operation. The newest and most modern is the $200,000 structure located at 816 Sixth Street Southwest. These clubs are the meeting places of 17,000 youngsters. Here they are taught athletics . . . from tumbling to track. Crafts, from metal work to mask-making. Here they are offered lively, interesting educational facilities . . . in libraries, lectures, quiz programs. These clubhouses take the youth of our city off the street corners into the heart of the community.

• The Metropolitan Police Boys' Club operates a summer camp at Scotland, Maryland. The Police Boys' Club Band gives numerous concerts for civic organizations, homes and hospitals. Forty-two boys from the band spent two weeks last year at their camp where they enjoyed musical instruction, drilling and marching.

• Today we are appealing to the people of Washington to help continue these important activities. Funds are needed for more and better clubhouses. It takes money to operate and equip the present clubhouses. The Police Boys' Club is supported only by public memberships; there are no other sources of funds. It is not a member of the Community Chest. Let's help these deserving youngsters become good citizens of our community by supporting the present campaign for $250,000. Clip the membership coupon on this page and drop it in the mail now. America's future is in your hands!
